UPHOLD RIGHT OF GOULD TO SENATE SEAT

Committee Recommends Dismissal of Walsh Charge Against Maine Man

FIND NO TRACE OF FRAUD

$100,000 Transaction Had No Relation to Election, Report States

Washington, D. C. (AP)—The right of Senator Gould, Republican, Maine, to place in the senate, was upheld Monday in the report of the senate elections sub-committee that investigated charges against him.

The investigation of Senator Gould's qualifications was made at the instance of Senator Walsh, Democrat, Montana, who based his demands on charges that the senator had turned over $100,000 to former Premier Fleming of New Brunswick, in connection with a contract for a railroad. Gould on the witness stand, denied that any fraud was involved. The sub-committee members recommended that the charges be dropped.

POINTS DECIDED

The report Monday declared the sub-committee is "in entire agreement in the case in the following particulars:

"A.—The undertaking by the Hon. Arthur R. Gould and his associates to build the railroad, was, in the beginning, free from suspicion of dishonesty or fraud.

"B.—The transaction here inquired into had, in fact, no relation to the election to the senate of the Hon. Arthur R. Gould in 1926, or to his election to the senate of the United States in the election held in the state of Maine in 1928.

"C.—The transaction occurred more than 14 years prior to said election.

"D.—It affirmatively appears that the Hon. Arthur R. Gould is a man of good character.

"E.—The premises considered, your committee recommends that further action in the instant case be not taken and that the right of the Hon. Arthur R. Gould to a seat in the senate be confirmed."

Wascott is 46 miles south of here. No one was hurt. Because of the wreck the March term of federal court scheduled to begin Monday morning, will be delayed until afternoon, as Stanley F. Ryan, United States district attorney, was passenger on the train held up by the wreck.

INVOKE CLOTURE RULE ON PROHIBITION BILL

Butler And Hilles Clash On Cal's Prospects In Election Next Year

Columbia Head Sees Midwest Vote Democratic to Punish President

New York (AP)—Conflicting analyses of national sentiment on the 1928 presidential election came Monday from Charles D. Hilles, vice-chairman of the Republican national committee, and President Nicholas Murray Butler of Columbia university.

Mr. Hilles now is on a tour of the west, studying the political situation. Dr. Butler has returned from a speaking tour of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin and Minnesota.

Mr. Hilles prediction of a "sweeping victory for the Republican party in New York state and the nation in 1928" on the basis of the prosperity of the last six years, was met by Dr. Butler's statement that the farmers of the midwest are preparing to vote the Democratic ticket "to punish President Coolidge for vetoing the McNary-Haugen act."

Dr. Butler sees in the midwestwest "a tremendous sentiment for repeal of the prohibition amendment" and "great opposition to a third presidential term. Those whom I saw and addressed indicated as strong a hostility to a third presidential term as they did to the federal prohibition law," Dr. Butler said.

SMITH SUPPORT GROWS

Governor Smith of New York, Dr. Butler declared, seems to be "not only the strongest, but pretty nearly the 'president possibility' in the Democratic party. I heard some talk of Governor Ritchie and some of Senator Reed of Missouri," he said, "but everywhere I found people eager to know more about Governor Smith and were kindly disposed toward him. If the Democrats name a wet and the Republicans a dry I fear the Republicans would be defeated."

Mr. Hilles in a statement forwarded to his office here from California pointed to "bank earnings, savings bank deposits, transportation figures, mercantile sales, production in all lines, prices lower than in 1926 and full employment," to back his prediction of Republican victory. He also cited reduction in government expenditures and the public debt and a $350,000,000 treasury surplus. Does it seem reasonable that a country so well governed under President Coolidge would turn from a party which has made such successful and happy prevalent conditions possible? Mr. Hilles asked.

SETTLE BALANCES IN TOBACCO POOL

Growers Will Receive More Than $300,000 Within Next Two Weeks

Madison (AP)—Settlement of all balances on 1922, 1923 and 1925 tobacco crops which were not disposed of in the south was authorized by directors of the Northern Wisconsin Cooperative Tobacco pool Monday following a meeting held over the weekend.

As a result of the authorization growers will receive more than $300,000 within the next two weeks in settlement of the balance due on these three crops.

A final drive for new contracts with the growers was set for March 20 to 31, a move which the board explained was giving the growers "one final chance to answer whether or not they care to continue the cooperative marketing of tobacco."

As a measure of economy, the board also authorized reduction in the force of the pool, beginning April 1. Cancellation of all federal licenses on all its warehouses was ordered by the board because "it was deemed advisable not to continue carrying any expenses on account of these federal licenses until it is decided whether the farmers are going to continue their operations."

HALIBUT FISHING FLEET IS SAFE AFTER STORM

Seward, Alaska (AP)—Alaska's halibut fishing fleet, the largest in the world, took its work again Monday after having survived one of the worst storms in recent years—a hurricane which sent the 270 small craft scurrying for safety Saturday and threatened for a time to swamp the lighter vessels. Only sudden cessation of the storm prevented disaster as the vessels, carrying nearly 1,000 fishermen, were caught in the open sea. Apparently all the craft weathered the gale.

ITALIAN FLIER LEAVES RIO JANEIRO ON TRIP

Rio Janeiro, Brazil (AP)—Commander De Vito, Italian flier, left at 8:25 Monday morning for Sao Paulo, 210 miles to the southwest, in continuance of his four continent flight which began at Cagliari Sardinia, Feb. 12.

AS IT WAS CENTURY AGO, SO 'TIS NOW IN SOUTH CAROLINA

Columbia, S. C. (AP)—Golf bugs many of whom have to wait six days between whacks at the clubs, may expect no discrimination in their favor in Governor Richard's campaign to enforce South Carolina's century-old Sunday closing law.

This was clearly indicated when four players enroute to the links in Greenville were arrested Sunday, the state's second "blue" Sunday. These were the only arrests, but the lid was generally reported as clamped down tight in all principal cities far more so at least than a week before when first attempts were made to enforce the law.

Gasoline stations, garages, soda fountains, cigar stores and restaurants generally were closed down in the larger cities, while drug stores that remained open catered only to medicine purchasers.

Urgent bootleggers were reported operating in Greenville, selling them for 50 cents a package. Newsboys were chased from the streets in Aiken, a resort town.

Columbia quietly observed the closing hour while at Charleston reports were that only street cars and taxicabs operated.

COOLIDGE ADDS PRESTIGE IN INDUSTRIAL EAST BUT LOSES IN WEST

Copyright, 1927, by the Post Pub. Co. Washington—President Coolidge strengthened himself with the industrial east but lost prestige with the farming west. This is the consensus of opinion here on the political effect of his veto of the McNary-Haugen bill.

Just what this will mean when translated into actual delegates in the nominating convention in 1928 will depend upon farm prices at the time and whether a lapse of several months will have diminished the antagonism from the agricultural sections.

From the viewpoint of political strategy the president's supporters feel that he made a ten-strike. They say this because they think the veto message at least will cause debate in the farm sections, because the argument made will have to be answered. But it will cause little debate in the industrial east. On the contrary, the business men who were waiting to see whether Calvin Coolidge had the strength of character to stand up against political threats have become convinced that the same determination which characterized his veto of the soldier bonus has been revealed in his attitude on a piece of legislation which he termed "economic folly."

CAL'S FOLLOWING LARGE

As for delegates, they are most numerous in the big eastern states. Republican delegates from the south usually take their cue from eastern sources. As the states stand today, they voted against the McNary-Haugen bill with the exception of the south whose representatives in both houses are Democratic—the numerical strength of those against the McNary-Haugen bill would be sufficient to nominate a president.

Former Governor Lowden of Illinois, is a popular Republican, but whether he would ever get the delegations from New York, New Jersey, Ohio and New England by sponsoring legislation like the McNary-Haugen bill is at least open to doubt at this moment. His candidacy, however, might have the effect of blocking the nomination of Mr. Coolidge provided the eastern states were in 1928 lukewarm about the president. In that event the whole effect might be the selection of a compromise candidate.

The veto of the McNary-Haugen bill therefore may be said to endanger Mr. Coolidge's chances of renomination, though it does not necessarily mean he will be eliminated, for much water can run over the dam between now and June, 1928.

The fight from the west will be continued next December when congress convenes. Unquestionably the attorney-general's opinion that the bill would be declared unconstitutional will add another feature to the situation which has not been conspicuous before and will enable those who are on the fence in congress to say they are not ready to risk it.

1,800 BLUEJACKETS NOW IN NICARAGUA

Total U. S. Force Probably Will Grow to 3,000 Men Within Week

Managua, Nicaragua (AP)—American forces on the west coast of Nicaragua Monday totaled, 1,800. Four small detachments of sailors have been landed at Corinto from the destroyer tenders Altair and Melville. With the arrival of the transport Henderson, scheduled to reach Corinto in a week, the total probably will be swelled to 3,000. For maintaining communications and for use in observations, the Americans have six De Havilland planes and four two-seater scouting planes.

The British cruiser Colombo, is now anchored off Corinto, read, to take aboard British nationals if their lives are placed in jeopardy by fighting between Liberal and Conservative factions. The Colombo arrived here Saturday.

With the object of guarding the railroad line from Managua to Granada and to discourage the Liberals from making an attack on Granada, 350 marines have been ordered to Granada.

It is expected that naval forces will soon be ordered to the Matagalpa region as it is in line with the advance of the Liberal General Moncada.

INDIANA AGAIN SPIKES WISCONSIN CAGE HOPES

Madison (AP)—A smart quipster from the University of Indiana practically wrecked the championship aspirations of the University of Wisconsin basketball team, 31 to 23, at Bloomington places Wisconsin at a decided disadvantage in the close race for Big Ten honors.

In order to finish among the first four, the Badger team must win three of its five remaining contests. The Badgers play Illinois Monday night at Urbana and meet in a return engagement at Madison Saturday.

The Badger's defeat at the hands of Everett Dean's cakers marks the first time in Doc Mearns' regime at Wisconsin that the Badgers have bowed twice in one season to Indiana.

ASK SENATE TO BRING INSULT CONTEMPT CHARGE

Washington (AP)—The senate was asked Monday by its committee on immigration to hold in contempt Samuel Insull, Chicago, public utilities operator; his personal attorney, Daniel J. Schuyler, and Thomas W. Cunningham of Philadelphia, treasurer of the Pennsylvania Republican state committee.

In order to finish among the first four, the Badger team must win three of its five remaining contests. The Badgers play Illinois Monday night at Urbana and meet in a return engagement at Madison Saturday.

HOUSE COMMITTEE GETS COOPER IMPEACHMENT

Washington (AP)—Representative Joseph P. Kamp, Republican, New York, Monday closed his impeachment case against Federal Judge Frank Cooper of the New York district, and the house judiciary committee took it under advisement.

Naming the more important of the companies which have accepted the law, President Calles said the 280 companies which have complied have solicited on the whole 642 petroleum concessions on lands with claims previous to May 1, 1917.

"These concessions embrace a total of 26,835,000 acres," the cablegram said. "The lands with claims prior to May 1, 1917, which the 22 companies possess, who did not comply with the petroleum law, embraces a total extent of 1,661,000 acres. Consequently, the lands which have not complied with the petroleum law represent approximately 6 per cent. of the total area of land on which claims exist prior to May 1, 1917."

"I will send you by mail fuller and more detailed information. I am pleased at the interest which you are taking in this matter and God grant the data submitted to you may be of use."

The message was signed "affectionately yours." Senator Borah's message sent on Jan. 22 said:

"If agreeable, may I be advised as to the exact facts relative to oil companies accepting the petroleum law? How many have accepted, and how many have not accepted? I would like also to be advised the names of the more important companies which have not accepted."

SENATE VOTE LIMITS TIME FOR DEBATE

Upper House Declines to Apply Cloture Rule on Public Building Bill

Washington (AP)—The cloture rule, limiting debate was invoked by the senate Monday to force action on the prohibition and customs reorganization bill put forward by the administration.

Assistant Secretary Andrews backed the measure, which also had the support of dry organizations. Some of the vets in the senate also favored it, while others threatened a filibuster against it. The vote was 53 for cloture and 27 against, or one more than the required two-thirds majority.

Monday's action marked the fourth time the senate has agreed to restrict its debate, and on only one previous occasion has a domestic question been involved. That was in the discussion of the McFadden Branch banking bill. Those voting for the cloture motion included Leprout, Wisconsin. Senators Borah and LaFollette voted against it.

Just prior to the adoption of cloture for prohibition reorganization, a move to also limit debate on the $125,000,000 public buildings bill, which would have authorized the immediate beginning of the governments five year program, was defeated by a vote of 52 for cloture and 31 against.

The refusal to adopt clotures, even if it prevents passage of the bill at this session, will not affect the first year's program for public buildings. Treasury officials have taken into consideration possibility that the measures, which would double the funds on hand would fail at this session, but they hold that its enactment by the next congress will be in plenty of time to assure their five year program.

BRITAIN PROMISES TO HELP LIMIT ARMS

Reply Regarded as Opening Way for Three-power Naval Agreement

Washington (AP)—Great Britain's response to the American overture for further naval limitation, received at the state department Monday, accepted President Coolidge's invitation to discuss the subject and said that the British delegates would "do their best to further the success of the proposed conversation."

Together with the Japanese acceptance, the reply was regarded as probably opening the way for a three-power consideration of limitation of small classes of warcraft in line with the principles applied to first line ships at the Washington conference.

It was thought that some such project was under study here, although the British and Japanese acceptance, together with the French and Italian refusals, will be carefully examined before any decision is announced.

Up to three years ago he practiced at Milwaukee and came here to locate, his wife having been Rose Schuette, daughter of the late John Schuette, president of the Manitowoc Savings bank. The widow and two children survive.

PERSHING'S ORDERLY HANGED IN MISSOURI

St. Louis, Mo. (AP)—Robert Johnson, 29-year-old Negro, was hanged Monday for a criminal assault on a white married woman. Johnson showed little emotion as he approached the gallows in the St. Louis jail yard at Clayton. Previously he had admitted he attempted to rob the woman, but denied the assault.

The Negro had been sentenced to hang a month ago but was granted a reprieve through the intervention of General John J. Pershing, whose private orderly Johnson had been during the war in France.

Most U. S. Oil Concerns Obey Ruling, Calles Says

Washington (AP)—President Calles of Mexico in a communication sent directly to Chairman Borah, of the senate foreign relations committee, has informed the senator that 350 companies have complied with the Mexican petroleum law.

The communication, which was in reply to one sent by Senator Borah, who is hostile to the administration's policies in Latin-America, was made public Monday by Mr. Borah.

Dated Jan. 24, it listed 22 companies which had refused to comply with the law. Among these Calles listed Standard Oil of Indiana, Doheny and Bridge Mexican Sinclair, Standard Atlantic, Mexican Crude, American International, Mexican Gulf, Capuchinas and Mexican Crude.

Naming the more important of the companies which have accepted the law, President Calles said the 280 companies which have complied have solicited on the whole 642 petroleum concessions on lands with claims previous to May 1, 1917.

LOSES LEASES

BUTLER ORDERED TO ASSUME COMMAND OF MARINES IN CHINA

Sun Receives New Troops and Prepares to Defend City of Shanghai

He will unify the command of the Fourth regiment, about 1,200 strong, which arrived at Shanghai Feb. 23, and take charge of the smaller detachments at Peking, Manila, and other stations. The navy department to date has given no indication that the marines on ships in Chinese waters will be landed.

SEES PLANE FALL

"My machine failed to respond when I worked the levers controlling direction," said Major Dargue. "The first sensation was that my end had arrived. I quickly started to unloose the straps which bound me in my seat and moved to open the parachute. I then saw myself lifted by a force of the parachute and the rapid fall of the plane and I started for earth with the machines the New York and Detroit falling as one. I tried to pull myself out somehow, but I believe my weight helped in getting the parachute free. Suddenly it was released from the falling machines and I was saved from certain death."

The remaining planes, the St. Louis and San Francisco, will hop off Tuesday morning for Asuncion, Paraguay. When they reach Montevideo, Uruguay, they will await the Premier, who has been waiting behind the main squadron since it was held up at Tumaco, Colombia, because of engine difficulties. The San Antonio is now at Talcahuano, Chile, and is expected to reach Buenos Aires Wednesday.

ARGENTINE IN TRIBUTE TO 2 DEAD U. S. AGES

Cavalry, Artillery and Aviation Sections Pay Military Honors

Buenos Ayres (AP)—A sorrowing nation Monday was paying homage to two American army aviators, killed in Saturday's crash between the planes New York and Detroit.

The bodies of Captain Clinton F. Woolsey, and Lieutenant John E. Bennett of California, Pan-American good will fliers, lay in state at the military club. There was a continuous procession of Argentine citizens past the bodies of the aviators.

Arrangements were made to put the bodies on the steamship Vauban Monday afternoon for the journey to the United States, after services at the Episcopal cathedral. Cavalry, artillery and aviation sections, were ordered to render military honors. President De Alvear, who on Friday had greeted the members of the Good Will squadron at Mar Del Plata, the summer capital, returned to Buenos Aires to attend the services. The flight will be resumed Tuesday.

TWO ESCAPE DEATH

Major Herbert A. Dargue, in command of the squadron, and Lieutenant Ennis Whitehead, reserve pilot of the New York, had a narrow escape from death. Lieutenant Whitehead injured his left ankle when he touched the ground with his parachute and walks with some difficulty.

Major Dargue described how the Detroit crashed into his plane and how he escaped with his life.

"We were nearing Palomar" (15 miles from Buenos Aires) he said. "The wind was calm. We closed up the distance between the planes, according to custom, in a formation resembling a diamond the front and rear planes higher than the machines to the right and left so they could go lower in case of danger. But the crash occurred. The Detroit was to the left of my plane, the New York. At the signal 'break formation' the Detroit began to leave. Seeing the formation opening, I confined my attention to my own plane, but suddenly the Detroit, instead of continuing to ram the formation converged upon my machine, jutting it slightly on the left wing, and instantly the tragedy had occurred."

FALL GAVE INFLUENCE

The court found that the interest and influence of Fall, as well as his official action, were corruptly secured by Doheny for the making of the contracts and leases. Fall, the court said, had stated that in conducting the leasing negotiations he would act himself and that the Doheny company acted upon the belief that Fall controlled the situation. The court held the Doheny company had preferential treatment. It was well established, the court found, that contracts and leases were made without competition.

Furthermore, the opinion continued, the leasing act of 1920, under which the leases and contracts were made, did not authorize the wholesale removal of the oil from the ground, but was intended only to aid in the conservation of the oil in the ground as a reserve, and granted the secretary of the navy full discretion in the sale, exchange or storage of it. A similar case brought by the government to cancel the Teapot Dome lease held by Harry F. Sinclair still is pending.

POLICEMAN BLINDED BY LIQUOR-CRAZED ROOMER

Rock Island, Ill. (AP)—Policeman William J. McCarthy, one of two officers wounded shortly before midnight Sunday night by a liquor-crazed man, who then killed himself, will recover, but will probably be blind. McCarthy is in a hospital here with his left eye out and his right filled with shot, and with slight hope that his sight will be saved.

Policeman Tom Balsebeck, who with McCarthy answered the call to a residence to quell a disturbance raised by William R. Taylor, a roomer, was only slightly wounded by a charge from Taylor's shotgun. Taylor ended his own life by firing a charge from his gun into his chest, and died almost instantly.

His body was found there by the searchers, who stated a hunt for him, when they learned he had taken a bottle of poison from a cabinet. Cowan came here to visit his wife, employed at the hotel.

FALL POLICY NOT LEGAL IS COURT RULING

Agreements Were Tainted by Fraud, Supreme Court Says in Opinion

SINCLAIR CASE IS NEXT Decision Cancels Both Lease and Contract Awarded to E. L. Doheny

Washington (AP)—Edward L. Doheny must give up the naval oil leases and contracts awarded him when Albert B. Fall was secretary of the interior. Nor will he receive back the money he spent in attempting to carry the agreements into effect.

In an opinion amounting to a victory for the government, the supreme court held Monday that the agreements not only were tainted by fraud, but that the Fall leasing policy under which they were made was illegal.

It was under this same policy that the Teapot Dome lease was given to Harry F. Sinclair, although the suit to cancel that lease was not directly involved in Monday's finding.

NO DISSENTING OPINION

The opinion of the court was announced by Justice Butler, and there was no dissent. It completely affirmed the findings of the court of appeals, holding that the Doheny leases and contracts are invalid and that Doheny is entitled to no compensation.

In its sweeping opinion the court held that the lease by which Doheny interests were to develop the Elk hills naval oil reserve and the contract by which they were to build storage facilities at Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, were tainted by fraud and corruption. The decision cancelled both the lease and the contract, confirming the findings of the lower court.

"The highest tribunal based its decision on evidence deduced in the trial court and previously brought to light in the famous senate oil inquiry," showing how the negotiations were conducted without competitive bidding and in secrecy, and how, before the deal was consummated, Doheny sent Fall $100,000 in a little black bag.

The final finding Monday was taken without regard for the verdict of a jury in the federal court here which acquitted Fall and Doheny of a criminal conspiracy charge based on the $100,000 transaction.

MARION INSURANCE AGENT KILLED BY TRAIN AT CROSSING

Guy Buhr Dies Almost Instantly; 2 Injured at Neenah Grade Crossing

Guy Buhr, 25 years old, Marion life insurance agent, was killed almost instantly at 12:30 Saturday afternoon when the car he was driving was struck by a northbound Northwestern train at a railroad crossing about two miles east of Marion. The body was killed several rods.

Buhr was returning to Marion from the farm home of his father, John, where he had eaten dinner. The accident occurred on a private road between the farm and the main highway. The engineer said he believed Buhr saw the train approach, as the automobile appeared to slow down some distance before the crossing, and then suddenly started.

Near the crossing, it evidently became apparent to the motorist that he would be unable to get across the tracks before the train went by, and he again attempted to stop his car. It stopped on the tracks.

Buhr tried desperately to get out of his car, but the train struck him just as he stepped on the running board. That he attempted to stop his car before he reached the tracks was indicated by the drawn emergency brake, witnesses said.

The car was totally destroyed. Buhr was married and had one child visiting in Michigan.

Two Appleton men escaped serious injury at Neenah at 12:30 Sunday morning when they drove their automobile into a Soo Line locomotive which had stopped at the crossing on Main-st.

Arthur Knoll, 531 Winnebago-st., was slightly cut about the head and bruised about the body, and William Burns, 817 Piffard-st., escaped with a few bruises. The car was a Chevrolet sedan and was driven by Burns.

The automobile is practically wrecked, the motor being driven back into the body. Both occupants were taken to Theda Clark hospital, but Burns was released a few hours later.

Two States Involved In Fight Over A Power Dam On The Colorado River

The Horse Mesa dam, on the Salt River in Arizona, now in the course of construction. The rock formations are similar to those in Boulder Canyon. Left - Sketch showing course of the Colorado River through Arizona, Nevada and California, with bridge canyon damsite indicated.

California put pen to it—conditionally. The rest of the states set down their signatures.

Behind it all is the California-Arizona fight over the construction of the dam. California wants a dam at Boulder Canyon, principally for flood protection for its Imperial Valley to the south. Arizona doesn't want a dam at Boulder Canyon.

Arizona has filed claims on several dam sites, among them the sites at Bridge Canyon, and Glen Canyon, both further up the river and, incidentally, on Arizona soil. Arizona contends the Boulder Canyon dam site is in an earthquake belt and that the dam there would, through the backing up of the water, submerge a dozen or so dam sites in Arizona. California says Arizona is unable to develop the water herself and is not wanting anyone else to develop it.

The lack of sympathy between California and Arizona is occasioned in a large measure by the fact that California's attention is riveted on flood control and the assurance of a good domestic supply of water for Los Angeles. Arizona's eye is on the prospect for irrigation water and on money from power revenues levied against Southern California for power derived from a Colorado river dam.

Phoenix—(AP)—An innocent-looking river canyon on the Colorado river in the southwestern part of the United States is the source of an interstate fight that has reached across the continent and into official Washington. It is Boulder Canyon, on the Nevada-Arizona boundary line, and a bill embodying provisions for the construction of a water-diversion and power dam there has become a congressional bone of contention.

The imbroglio, which is the Colorado river, whose muddy waters and those of its tributaries lap the feet of seven states, dates back to the drawing up of a seven-state compact at Santa Fe, in 1922, providing for an apportionment of the waters among Arizona, Utah, Colorado, California, Nevada, Wyoming and New Mexico. Arizona refused to sign the com-

15-YEAR-OLD BOY SMOTHERS BLAZE

Throws Rug Over Fire as Family Telephones to Fire Department

The Appleton fire department responded to three alarms, resulting from minor fires over the weekend. Two fires took place Saturday evening within about an hour of each other, and the third was reported shortly after noon Sunday.

A few rugs were destroyed in a small fire at the Charles Poppe home, 808 E. Washington-st., at 12:30 Sunday afternoon. A bowl of paint which Mr. Poppe had placed on a gas stove ignited, and when he attempted to lift it off the stove, he burned his hand and dropped the dish.

The building, fluid ran over the kitchen rug, spreading flames, and a member of the family ran to the telephone to call up the fire department. While the call was being made, Raymond, their 15-year-old son, seized up another carpet and threw it over the flames, smothering them. The fire was out when the fire department arrived.

No damage resulted from two chimney fires reported Saturday evening. The first occurred at the August Frenzi residence, 215 N. Morrison-st., and the second was reported at 9:30 at the George Driesen home, 226 E. McKinley-st.

ANDREWS SEEKING METHODS TO STOP MALT MANUFACTURE

Wisconsin Judge's Decision Upholding Brewer Arouses Interest

BY BASCOM N. TIMMONS
Washington, D. C.—The decision of Federal Judge Luse, of Wisconsin in the case of Carl Ebner, Fort Atkinson, upholding the right of a licensed brewery to manufacture malt and malt syrup, aroused the widest interest here. The prohibition unit will study the issues involved in the case clearly.

The unit's legal department has not yet seen the text of Judge Luse's decision. Lack of restrictions in the sale of malt is making the task of preventing the manufacture of beer exceedingly difficult.

General Andrews recently appeared before a committee of Congress to stress the difficulty of handling what he termed "wild-cat" breweries. Andrews, prohibition generalissimo, told the committee that he felt that in the next year his machinery would be so perfected that there will be no real beer coming out of the old line breweries.

"But as we stop the old-line breweries there springs up the wild-cat brewery also some place in the city," Andrews said. "This wild-cat brewery may be successful because manufacturers of malt and wort, some of them at least, are selling in quantities to men who want to run a wild-cat brewery. This wort enables a man who wants to run a malt factory in a basement to manufacture his own beer in a basement. He does not have to make mash."

"There is no law against the sale of malt or wort; because there is nothing intoxicating about wort. It works out like this. The malt is sold ready and just before it commences to ferment the wort, a perfectly innocent liquid is added, the fermentation goes on in the basement and the saloon-keeper has got his beer."

Difficulty of handling the wort situation is added to by the fact that the wort is also sold for home cooking, and many domestic uses. Andrews said he intended to call a conference of manufacturers of malt and wort to meet him and bring about an arrangement by which they will quit selling in quantities sufficient to indicate that it is being used to supply a saloon or be used in that way.

"There is no law authorizing us to shut off the sale of malt and wort; except in conspiracy," Andrews said. "Section 18 of the Volstead Act says that a man may not sell any substance to be used in the manufacture of intoxicating liquor—any substance. If we can prove he is selling it knowingly to be used for the manufacture of intoxicating liquor, then we can punish the man who sells it, and that will be my handle in dealing with these gentlemen who are manufacturing and selling it."

TRAFFIC TEST IS CARRIERS' PLAN

Results Will Be Used in Controversy Over Proposed Rate Increases

Common carriers in this section of the country have agreed to make a traffic test in Western trunk line territory from March 25 to April 8 as the result of a meeting of representatives of carriers and shippers the past weekend in Chicago to thresh out proposed increases in freight rates requested by the carriers. The proposed rates are opposed by shippers of the middlewest who say that the railroads already are being operated at a great profit. The carriers asserted increases are needed to keep them from operating at a loss. Roy G. Wort, traffic manager of the Appleton chamber of commerce, who is working with the shippers in opposing the new rates, attended the conference.

The figures used in the traffic test will be based on terminal and road haul expenses in this territory. Wort said. The object is to determine actual conditions in carrying freight. Appleton probably will be selected as one of the terminals in the test, Mr. Wort said.

The shippers maintain that the carriers make profits by figuring an equal expense on their equipment whether it is being operated or standing idle. The shippers said that an engine will be taken to a city and will stand idle for several hours, but the railroad figures its expenses the same for fuel, and other things as if the engine were using the fuel. The engine may be used all that day or it may be idle part of the time but the expenses are figured for the time it is out as if it had been running the entire time.

FIND CLIPPINGS OF HIGH SCHOOL FOR NINE YEARS

Clipping files of activities and people connected with Appleton high school from 1912 to June, 1921 have been found at the school and show a complete history of the school for these nine years. H. H. Mr. Heible is making an effort to secure a file of the Post-Crescent for the last six years and has asked anyone who is willing to let the school have his old papers communicate with him. Appleton Assemblyman Will Help Direct Policies of Institution

Oscar J. Schmiede, Appleton, assemblyman from the second Outagamie-co district, recently was named by President Glenn Frank of the University of Wisconsin, as a member of the Memorial Union board. This board directs the policies of the now $1,250,000 Union built at Madison by alumni and friends of the university. Other members of the board are President Frank, Dr. Alexander Meiklejohn, professor of philosophy, Dean S. H. Goodnight, Miss F. D. Nardin, dean of women and M. B. Olbrich, member of the board of regents.

In making the appointment President Frank said:

"The appointment of this committee marks an important step in the history of the Memorial Union. It means the university is now actively taking over the responsibility for the project which has, up until this time, been guided by the fund raising committee of the alumni."

"The new university super-board will concern itself with all the problems of the Union outside those of money raising. These consist of problems of policy, government, furnishing and decorating, use of the building and financial maintenance."

FORD, COOLIDGE MAN, HELP REED GET PUBLICITY

Democratic Senator Is Engaged by Car Manufacturer to Fight Libel Suit

Washington—Henry Ford is known as a car manufacturer. He has said frequently that he thinks Mr. Coolidge is a good president, and it has been assumed that he would like to see him reelected in 1928.

Yet, by a strange trick of fate, Henry Ford is going to be very instrumental in putting the name of Senator James A. Reed of Missouri very prominently before the country. Reed is nursing a husky presidential boom of his own and, apparently, has a good chance of capturing the Democratic nomination; unwittingly, perhaps, Ford is about to boost his cause tremendously.

Ford has been sued for a million dollars by Aaron Sapiro, and has retained Reed to defend him when the suit comes to trial. And anyone who thinks that the nation-wide publicity Reed will receive during this trial won't help his president's candidacy can think again.

Reed will be the central figure in the trial. He is bound to cut such a court-room figure as to overshadow even his billionaire client. For days he will be on the first pages of every newspaper in the country.

The issues themselves are sensational. For Ford is accused of charging Sapiro, the famous cooperative organizer, with being in league with Jewish bankers who sought to dominate the world's food supply. Sapiro brought his suit, which begins in federal district court at St. Louis, March 7, against Ford and the Dearborn Independent Publishing Co.

Whatever the outcome, this trial will serve to keep Reed in the public eye for a good part of the period between the end of the expiring Congress and the opening of the Seventieth. There is nothing more pleasing to a budding presidential candidate than this privilege.

And Reed is such a brilliant criminal lawyer that the trial will be a worthy spectacle as well as an excellent opportunity for him to display his gifts to the country.

The country undoubtedly will hear even further from Reed before next December. It will be recalled that he was charging about the country at the head of his campaign funds investigating the committee, disarming up dirt by the shovel in the limelight's full glare, during the interim between the sessions of the Sixty-ninth Congress. He has stood head and shoulders above the other Democratic senators during the short session. His activities during the past session will be of enormous political interest, for the national conventions will then loom in the nearly immediate future.

Of course the president of the United States has an overwhelming edge on all rivals insofar as publicity is concerned. He is the one man whose every word and every movement is news. Consider the columns of news and feature stories that flood the nation whenever Mr. Coolidge takes his summer vacation. Consider the multitudinous times his picture is to be seen in your newspaper.

No more need to be said, but an interesting example was recently furnished when Speaker Nicholas Longworth made a hot "biz navy" speech and the president smothered him the next day with his naval disarmament message. Longworth hasn't been heard of since, but the president will be getting publicity out of the naval armament issue indefinitely and in a vastly larger and more effective way.

Al Smith and W. G. McAdoo obtained their maximum publicity in 1924. Their names are now household words in Democrat and Republican families alike. They will do whatever they can to increase it, but Reed is in a better position to impress himself upon the popular imagination.

John W. Davis carried no such appeal to the average citizen as goes with the Coolidge, Reed, McAdoo or Smith publicity. That is one reason why many Democrats are extremely anxious to avoid picking another candidate like Davis.

APPLETON MAN RETURNS TO U. S. FROM BRAZIL

Roland Miller, son of Mrs. E. P. Miller, Hotel Northern, Appleton, returned to the United States last week after spending eight months in Brazil where he went to establish a location for preliminary work to prepare eucalyptus wood for conversion into paper. Mr. Miller, while in the employ of the United States Forest Products laboratory at University of Wisconsin, discovered the process by which this South American wood can be made into paper.

Mr. Miller is a graduate of Appleton high school and Lawrence college and post graduate work at the University of Illinois. He is in New York city at present but probably will return to Appleton about the middle of March.

QUESTION EMPLOYERS ABOUT SUMMER JOBS

Questionnaires are being sent to all employers by the junior placement bureau of the United States Employment service in an attempt to check up on the possibilities for spring openings for young boys and girls. Inquiries are asked to tell how many boys or girls they employ, whether they will have any openings and what the nature of the work will be. It is hoped to place vocational school students in positions during the summer months.

SEEK REOPENING OF PHONE RATE CASE

Telephone Company Wants
Another Hearing on Green Bay Application

Madison—(AP)—The application of the Wisconsin Telephone company for rehearing of its proposal to increase rates in Green Bay is not expected to bring about a series of applications for rate increases in view of the circumstances. It was said in the state railway commission.

The application for rehearing is to be heard in Madison today. It results, according to the railroad commission, from the recent supreme court decision in the Waukesha Gas company case, in agreement with the United States supreme court's recent ruling that rate valuations must be made on the basis of present day prices. It is further, in the commission's eyes, a result of the commission's ruling some time ago on the telephone company's rates. The company had applied for a rate increase, submitted application for a still greater increase, and the commission allowed the increase less than that asked for in the first application.

Then the supreme court made a decision in the Waukesha case to coincide with the federal high court's ruling on valuations.

This ruling, in the opinion of the commission, will not be followed by myriad applications for increases in rates from public utilities because of the fluctuation of prices. It was explained that the valuation "on present day prices" will be with the change of prices in the next few years, so variant that companies will not seek to have their rates increased when changes of prices might later make them undesirable.

The Green Bay hearing will be only an application of the commission for rehearing of the petition and not upon the increase itself, this being decided later if the commission decides to grant rehearing.

STUDENTS DON'T LIKE STAYING AFTER SCHOOL

Staying after school does not appeal to the Appleton high school student who has been in the habit of coming late to school. Miss Louise Eubel, teacher in charge of the detention room, reported. Only one person was found in the punishment class one day last week and other days only four or five students are compelled to come.

The detention class was established at the beginning of the second semester and is held for one hour after school for those who have unexcused tardiness. When the pupils fail to report on the appointed day their punishment time is doubled.

Mechanical Devices Lose More Money Than Fake Oil

Madison—(AP)—The promotion of mechanical devices, from hairpins to washing machines and from bottle caps to airplanes has taken a greater toll from the investing public than fake oil and mining ventures, is the opinion of Miss Olga M. Steig, Examiner, Securities Division, Wisconsin Railroad Commission.

"The lure of large profits is no longer confined to these stocks which are expected to yield magnificent returns when the oil wells start spouting or the gold is brought out of the mines," Miss Steig continued.

"It is only natural that during the last decade the profits of Ford, General Motors and other successful automobile manufacturers should have stimulated the organization of new automobile enterprises financed by public stock sales, few of which have attained any degree of financial success, and many of which have unfortunately turned out to be mere stock selling schemes. The middlewest will not soon forget Pan Motors, which probably stands out as the most glaring of promotion schemes of the last ten or fifteen years. And the financial losses and actual financial distress occasioned by the many automobile accessory ventures and the truck and tractor companies which have sprung up in the last few years as a natural outgrowth of the increasing popularity and utility of the motor, will remain a poignant memory for years to come.

"It is surprising to be asked every now and then why the Commission allows the sale of stock in a venture which it does not permit the sale of securities in a venture which it knows cannot operate successfully. It would hardly be so foolish as to allow the sale of stock of a company promoting a perpetual motion device or a group of opium chain stores. The first is clearly impracticable and would serve no useful purpose. The second would be in violation of the law of the land and could not long survive.

"But between what one knows cannot succeed and what one believes cannot succeed there is a vast difference. If an applicant presents a plan of business that is not unlawful, unjust, unfair or unequitable, if the commissions it proposes to pay for the sale of the securities are not excessive, and if, in short, the securities are not inherently such as would work a fraud on the purchaser, the commission cannot refuse a permit, notwithstanding its own conviction that the enterprise will not operate successfully.

"The investor should remember that it was not the intent of the legislature, in enacting the Securities Law, to prevent speculation, or to stop the flow of capital into new enterprises merely because many of them eventually fail. The whole purposes of blue sky legislation is admirably summed up in the decision of a New York Court rendered in October, 1924.

"The statute is aimed at fraudulent devices and false representations. It was not designed to prevent speculation or investment. . . .

"If one shares the confidence and optimism of the inventor in a device, he should not be prevented from purchasing a share in it. The legislature sought only to protect against misleading and fraudulent devices and statements.

"If the facts are clear and the purchaser of stock is not misled, he is free to do as he pleases. The law seeks to guard the investor from fraud not from his own decisions, deliberate and freely made.

"Only when an intelligent public learns the art of wise selection of investments will the need for blue sky legislation cease to exist."

Prosperous Kaukauna Farmer Thought His Case Was Hopeless

Had spent hundreds of dollars without results before he learned of Dreo.

How many times have you taken medicine with every hope of it being just what you needed, later to find out you had gotten but little good from it? Nearly every half-sick ailing person has had that experience. Read what this local man says on the subject in a true statement made to the Dreo Co. at Schiltz Bros. Drug Store.

"Before I learned of Dreo I spent hundreds of dollars in an effort to get well but nothing helped me and I had just about given up hope," declared Mr. Nick Fock, a prosperous farmer and active churchman living on R. R. No. 5, Kaukauna, Wis.

"I used to suffer so from indigestion I'd just bend over with pain and although I cut down on food till I was scarcely eating anything my stomach was always filled with gas which bloated me up as tight as a drum and pressed against my heart. Often my heart would flutter so I thought it would jump out of my body. I was constipated all the time, my nerves were always on edge and I felt tired and worn out all the time.

"My condition grew lots better even the first week I took Dreo and now I have complete and perfect health. I can walk as straight as a soldier and I enjoy three hearty meals every day without the least sign of indigestion. My nerves have been steadied, my bowels regulated and I feel and look so much better in every way all my friends are astounded at the great change in me. I have no hesitation in giving Dreo full credit for my present good health and am glad to recommend it to anyone."

Mr. H. W. C. Marr, Baker, the well-known Expert from the Dreo Laboratories now at Schiltz Bros. Downtown Drug Store, is telling scores of people every day how to take Dreo for best results. Go to see him.

SHERIFFS MAKE MONEY ON PRISONERS, CHARGE

Madison—(AP)—Charges that sheriffs are making money from their counties by holding and boarding prisoners sentenced to the state prison and by bunting these men in transferring them to the state institution at Waupun, charging their counties on the basis of several trips, meanwhile, are made in a letter from a prisoner in the state penitentiary to Assemblyman J. D. Grandine, of Argonne.

In giving the letter to The Associated Press, Mr. Grandine said he did not know how true the charges were, or what action he could take toward remedying the situation if such exists but that he was looking up the law on the subjects touched upon in the letter. The letter, from J. O. Sherman, convicted and sent to the penitentiary under crime involving morality, declared that it was to "let you know of a condition here which is very important to those convicted of crimes and still more to the tax payers."

FOLLOW COOLIDGE LEADERSHIP

The house by a vote of 208 to 172 has passed the bill authorizing an appropriation for the immediate construction of three cruisers. The senate bill added an item of $1,200,000 to the naval appropriation bill for this purpose and the house reduced the amount to $450,000. It is understood that the senate will acquiesce in the compromise. The amount fixed by the house is merely for beginning construction.

President Coolidge is opposed to this legislation, having asked congress to postpone action pending the outcome of the Geneva disarmament conference. The house had previously sustained the president on the question. The change of sentiment in that body may be attributed directly to the rejection by France and Italy of the president's proposal for a five-power conference for limiting naval armament still further. Also, it is said the objections of Japan to an extension of the five-five-three ratio to cruisers had its effect. Since the provision for commencing construction of the three cruisers is a part of the navy appropriation bill, it is probable the president will have to accept it against his judgment.

Some sense, and a deal of nonsense, has been uttered on this controversy. Most of the former has come from the president, and most of the latter from jingo politicians. We think with the president it is more important at this particular time that the United States should engage in peace rather than in military movements. Of course, it is argued that the building of a big navy, or the keeping pace with the alleged building programs of other countries, is the greatest guarantee of peace. This, however, is only a half truth. In the broad sense it is a false assumption. The great armies and navies prior to 1915 were one of the chief causes of the world war. They had to be used.

Mr. Coolidge's efforts in behalf of disarmament and international peace are wholly commendable. Because he met with a temporary repulse from France and Italy is no reason why these ends may not be achieved. There is still a possibility of a three-power conference, and there are the opportunities before the League of Nations conference at Geneva. While these events are pending, the United States can well afford to mark time in the enlargement of its military establishment. There is more statesmanship in the president's course than in that of the house and senate. The theory that we suffer in prestige by restraint is chiefly in the minds of those who advance it. Finally, there is the fact, no matter what our jingoes may say, that for years to come there is no likelihood of our being involved in a great war, while our strength is ample to protect our interests in the Americas and the Pacific. On comparatively short notice we can out-build all of the powers combined. We stand to gain more by following the leadership of the president than that of congress in this matter.

THE NON-VOTING MAJORITY

This country is allowed to suffer from improper representation in the halls of legislature by the non-voting, stay-at-home majority, that large body of intelligent citizens who, by their crass neglect of the duties of that citizenship, consign their nation to the rule of inadequate representatives.

This is not a new ailment of the American people. They would fight to the death for the vote—and then never exercise the franchise thus obtained so dearly. It is, perhaps a species of carelessness, but, if so, it is a criminal carelessness. It is like calling in a plumber to prescribe for a child seriously ill with scarlet fever.

That is, in effect, what we do when we ignore the privilege and the duty of voting. We allow someone to prescribe a plumber to prescribe for a sick state when what is needed is a highly specialized person who understands states.

New York City is taking cognizance of the stay-at-homes who deliberately pass over to less qualified persons the reins of government and there has been formed a Committee on Active Citizenship which has been organized to recommend methods for arousing the voters to greater interest in the exercise of the franchise.

As a first step many thousands of questionnaires are being sent broadcast throughout the city, to be answered by all voters. From the information amassed from the answers to these questionnaires the committee hopes to formulate a campaign that will bring home to every voter the importance of casting his or her ballot.

Certainly in these times when so much depends upon the character of the men who are representing us in elective offices it is time that the stay-at-home majority discover its power to help the nation steer a straight course.

WISCONSIN FINANCES

Governor Zimmerman has asked the legislature to enact additional tax legislation for the replenishment of dwindling state funds. Upon signing the bill appropriating $750,000 as an emergency appropriation to provide indemnities for bovine tuberculosis work, the governor stated that the general fund now faces a deficit of $2,000,000. This seems to coincide with the statement made by Senator Titus recently. It does not square with State Treasurer Levitan's rejoinder that the treasury was in a flourishing condition, and that instead of a deficit it would wind up the year with a $20,000,000 surplus.

Somebody is wrong somewhere. If the governor is right, then it is apparent that the last administration made a mistake in remitting the state property-tax and this act was what it has been claimed to be all along, a political gesture to get votes. States taxes and finances are in a cloudy state. There is nothing scientific about either. Whatever is, is the result of politics, and raw politics at that. The time must be near at hand when the people will see through the trickery and chicanery that has governed legislative and executive policies at Madison with reference to taxation and the state's fiscal affairs. The putting of both on a sound, just and business basis is without a doubt Wisconsin's greatest need.

OLD MASTERS

Yet each man kills the thing he loves,
By each let this be heard,
Some do it with a bitter look,
Some with a flattering word,
The coward does it with a kiss,
The brave man with a sword!

Some kill their love when they are young,
And some when they are old,
Some strangle with the hands of Lust,
Some with the hands of Gold;
The kindest use a knife, because
The dead so soon grow cold.

Some love too little, some too long,
Some sell and others buy;
Some do the deed with many tears,
And some without a sigh;
For each man kills the thing he loves,
Yet each man does not die.

—Oscar Wilde: From "The Ballad of Reading Gaol."

With male students becoming more and more feminine, the day may come when college football teams will be made up of women players, according to a Wisconsin coach. "We always did think the Follies girls would make excellent additions to any school's putting staff. If football were played in the water, of course there'd be no doubt about it. . . . Occasionally you do see a girl with a long run in her stocking. . . . Just look at the football experience the ladies are getting now on the street cars. . . . But who'd play the backfield? The modern girls refuse to stand back for anybody. . . . If the ladies did play, however, there's one thing you could expect to see on the gridiron: some very pretty formations.

Chicago reporters have taken up bullet-proof vests. When they start carrying artillery with them when covering a story the old phrase, "batteries of newspapers," will at last become real.

Nick Tartagliano, largest man in New England, weight 518, was arrested for breaking the dry law. We predicted, some big strong fellow would come along and crack it.

Two thousand crows were shot dead by the embattled farmers of Salem county, N. J., according to a reporter. Imagination has not fled from the earth.

A man in Boston was fined $150 for selling liquor to his father. Maybe they were only celebrating Father and Son Week.

Because she had to get meals for her husband and eastern woman wants a divorce. Men are so old-fashioned.

A woman in Philadelphia was convicted of election fraud. Just as George Bernard Shaw says, women certainly are picking up politically.

A man on the same job in France for 70 years was awarded four medals. If he preserves he may get a raise yet.

Cornelius Vanderbilt is writing to pay off $2,000,000 in debts. That as the bankers say, certainly is writing it off.

Can't somebody declare Senator Heslin a neutral zone?

That storm on the Atlantic coast probably was stirred up by some California publicity man.

Congress seems to have gone on a filibuster.

PARENT AND CHILD, INC.

One of the eight or nine dissenting opinions among the 3000 or more ballots cast in our recent referendum on the question of sex instruction is this from a housewife:

"It is a subject on which I feel very strongly. It has been a theory of mine that the psychological moment to impart such knowledge is when the child comes to one with soul filled with the urge of the question. And I believe the child will come to the parent, and at an early age if there is the right sort of sympathetic understanding and partnership between them."

This is the reason why I say eight or nine dissenting opinions—I don't know whether to record this ballot as favoring or opposing our policy of teaching children the sacred truth just as we teach reading or arithmetic, in due course and not as something shameful or secret. Of course, I know that in the present state of education it is difficult or impossible to avoid the atmosphere of secrecy in the instruction of a child.

Mrs. J's theory is an excellent one as far as it goes. Happy is the mother who knows how to establish such a partnership with her daughter. Let Mrs. R. M. E. give us a glimpse of such happiness: she seems to have been instructed in the voice Mrs. J. thinks best, for she first explains that her mother began answering her question when she was about 6, and that mother always "bit by bit, as I asked" explained everything. Now in turn Mrs. R. M. E. says "my own daughter who is advanced for her age asked and received her answer at the tender age of 5 years. She was not shocked, accepted my explanation comparing human life with flowers, as a casual thing. She has never told." The worst she ever did was to tell my mother-in-law, who believes in ignorance (innocence, she calls it) that Mrs. X, whose husband was killed, was expecting a baby. Purity itself! I wouldn't miss the comradeship our talks have brought for a world. I tell her little innocent stories, and we laugh over 'our secrets,' knowing that when she hears anything at school, no matter what, she will talk it over with mother."

There you are, folks. Of course, there is one essential for the establishment of a successful partnership like that. Mother has to know the simple rudiments of life, how a flower grows from a seed and reproduces seed, how a bird or chicken grows from the egg, and so on. It is by comparison our own origin and reproduction with other forms of life that a child is best instructed. All helpful pamphlets or books or outlines of such instruction are based on the observation of the life and reproduction of plants, fishes, birds and animals. "The Wonderful Story of Life," obtainable at 5 cents a copy from the government printing office, Washington, D. C., is one of the best of these for a mother to follow in instructing her children.

Several voters in the referendum mentioned that they had received their first knowledge or instruction from mother or father when a domestic or pet animal gave birth to young. This might afford the "psychological moment" which one housewife urged as the proper occasion for instructing children.

A teacher aged 30, graduate of high school and normal, received his or her (I can't divine the sex) first knowledge at the age of 10 years, from "observation, perception, silent curiosity." This teacher has never had any other instruction, "no help from any source," and has been interested in sex life only "as in astronomy." This teacher votes "The less said about sex the better. The teaching of clean habits is sufficient. Sex attraction is inevitable."

Vincent's Angina

We have heard much about "trench mouth" lately. What is it? Is there risk of contracting it from a fellow workman? (L. A.)

Answer—Vincent's angina, an infection of the throat, sometimes involving the lining of the mouth, gums, nasal passages, usually accompanied with slow prolonged fever and general malaise similar to that of tonsillitis or diphtheria, cheesy grayish exudate, with foul odor. It is likely to be caught from a fellow workman. It is caused by a specific germ.

EXIT JAMES FORD RHODES

I have been rather astonished at the very small amount of attention that was paid to the death recently of James Ford Rhodes, author of perhaps the greatest history of the Civil war ever written. So far as I know, the newspapers did not even carry the story, at least if they did, it was done so inconspicuously that it might almost as well have been omitted.

Although it was an item that would have interested me greatly, I did not learn of Rhodes' death until I saw it mentioned some weeks later in a magazine.

And this is in a way rather discouraging as a reflection of public interest in such things. For obviously it shows that the masses of people don't care a whoop about a man like James Ford Rhodes or about the literary monument he has left behind him. If the million cared about them, such a death would have been played up in the newspapers under large heads.

Rhodes was in his way first class. In the field of American history he was as genuinely first class as a man who has become president is assumed to be. He was a leader who was interested in history. Had he followed the line of least resistance he would probably have remained a banker; in that case he might have become very wealthy and he might have won other honors, political or otherwise.

But he deliberately abandoned his profession to be able to devote his time to the writing of history. It is not often that such an experiment is successful, but it was conspicuously successful in this case. Rhodes had made money enough in the banking business so that he could indulge himself in his passion for historical investigation. He spent his money freely and he devoted many years of his time to the researches that were required to collect the material for his history of the Civil war.

And that history, in six large volumes, stands almost alone. Authorities on history have told me that there is nothing else for that particular period that, in their opinion, can compare with it, and they frequently express the wish that there were similar histories for the other periods in American history. But while every period of this country's history has been covered by able scholars, the opinion is often expressed that as yet no James Ford Rhodes has come forward to do for the others periods what he did for the Civil war.

Rhodes' history is a work on the scale. It does not begin with the opening of the war but with the scenes that led up to the conflict for a generation before the election of Lincoln. Neither does he close with the battle of Appomattox but he carried on the story for another generation, showing what flowed from the big conflict between the states.

"The astonishing fact about Rhodes' history is its high literary level. This might have been expected from a professional writer of history, but it is surprising in a man who made no claim literary distinction. He was not primarily interested in history as literature. Words and sentences were merely a means of expression to him; the history was the thing. But almost unconsciously he expressed himself in a way that gave distinction to his history.

The advice has been given before in this column to read Rhodes' history; this is an appropriate time to carry the intention into effect. It is hard to think of a better way of spending one's time.

And that history, in six large volumes, stands almost alone. Authorities on history have told me that there is nothing else for that particular period that, in their opinion, can compare with it, and they frequently express the wish that there were similar histories for the other periods in American history. But while every period of this country's history has been covered by able scholars, the opinion is often expressed that as yet no James Ford Rhodes has come forward to do for the others periods what he did for the Civil war.

Rhodes' history is a work on the scale. It does not begin with the opening of the war but with the scenes that led up to the conflict for a generation before the election of Lincoln. Neither does he close with the battle of Appomattox but he carried on the story for another generation, showing what flowed from the big conflict between the states.

"The astonishing fact about Rhodes' history is its high literary level. This might have been expected from a professional writer of history, but it is surprising in a man who made no claim literary distinction. He was not primarily interested in history as literature. Words and sentences were merely a means of expression to him; the history was the thing. But almost unconsciously he expressed himself in a way that gave distinction to his history.

The advice has been given before in this column to read Rhodes' history; this is an appropriate time to carry the intention into effect. It is hard to think of a better way of spending one's time.

See-Sawing On Broadway

By Gilbert Swan

New York—And what, you ask, is all this about the Broadway nudist?

Come with me for a little stroll . . . At every street corner newstands flaunt magazines allegedly devoted to art, but actually offering an excuse for printing every obtainable nude photograph. . . .

Down Broadway, up 42d and down 43d . . . Up one street and down another and the yawning foyers of a half dozen theaters do more than invite the wandering eye. . . . Here are great frames crowded with beautiful and shapely girls in every degree of undress. . . .

The invasion of nudity came slowly over from Paris. . . . Each year certain producers grew bolder. It was like some prearranged dance of seven veils. For a moment or night a producer took the breath-taking plunge. As a finale for a music review he flashed upon the eye a quite decorative damsel with as little on as possible.

Once that was over there was a general effort to think up all possible excuses—under the guise of art, of course—for displaying unclothed youth. To Broadway it became a bit commonplace. Old-timers rather welcomed the announcements that a completely clad performance was to be given.

But the news had filtered through the nation. The sly wink had gone around and visitors from near and far deluged the box offices.

Methods of display changed from week to week. At first these displays were saved for a moment or two before an intermission curtain.

Then, behind a flimsy curtain of cheesecloth-like texture, would be given a tableau. And some of these were not without beauty and artistic grouping.

It was not long before a partially clad chorine would find her way closer to the footlights. And, again, there came the time when a coat of gold was draped upon the dancers in lieu of raiment.

And so it has gone. . . . That dressing the chorines should at this day and date become important draws a smile, no doubt, from the perpetual New Yorker. For two years or more the parade has gone on.

I recall being very surprised last summer when a maidently aub, visiting from Michigan, expressed unbelief at seeing the unclothed photos in the lobby. . . .

"That's advertising, of course. They really don't . . ." she hesitated. And, it may be, this unbelief is quite general. When one is so close at hand it is difficult to figure just what the outside reaction might be.

Yet such are the attractions for which the visitors—at least the lone males—first search upon reaching Manhattan. And so long as there is a desire to be shocked, doubtless there will be those ready to provide a shocker.

Q. Has the number of leaves on an apple tree any effect upon the quality of the fruit? R. K.

A. Tests made at the Arlington Farm by government horticulturists showed that at least thirty to forty medium-sized leaves per fruit were necessary to obtain apples of good size and qualities. When a smaller number of leaves was present, the fruit was not only smaller in size, but was low in dry weight, low in sugar content, and of poor dessert quality.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE
Death strikes GARRETT FOLSOM while swimming with a party of friends at Ocean Town, N. J. At the HOTEL MAJUSCA, where they all had been guests, an inquiry is begun after a doctor, perfunctorily examining him on the beach, pronounces him dead.

Folsom's companions had been ROGER NEVILLE, MRS. HELEN BARNABY and CARMELITA VALDON. It is established that Folsom, just before his death, had been standing next to NED BARRON, who was one of a party including his wife, VADELINNE, and her sister, FAIR, and her son, ROBIN SEARS, and his father, CROYDON SEARS.

It is decided to telegraph Folsom's sister, ANASTASIA, in New York. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER VI
Everybody liked Helen Barnaby, but nobody loved her. Her gilded hair was bobbed, and her smart clothes were too girlish for her years, but she was a comfortable sort and her friendship with beautiful Carmelita was advantageous to both.

They had been intimates for years, but this was the first time they had been away from home in company.

Fairly well to do, the Duchess cared only for her own comfort and ease. Men were of secondary consideration, save as they entertained or amused her.

Carmelita Valdon, on the other hand, was a born coquette and a siren. With very little money she contrived to dress well and her beauty and charm did the rest.

At heart she was an adventuress, but so careful was she of her reputation that no breath of scandal or even reproach had ever touched her.

Yet she schemed to meet and attract rich men and women and usually succeeded in making friends with them.

Garrett Folsom she had known for some years, and though they were friendly, it could not be said that he was in love with her. Roger Neville, too, was an old-time friend, but not an admirer, so while at Ocean Town Carmelita had endeavored to find a new friend who would be a devoted slave.

There were many who would readily accept such a position, but the lady was exacting in her requirements. She doubted those who were not sufficiently generous or who did not amuse her.

"We can't take up with anybody," she told her friend. "I won't have to do with ordinary men. I must have my friends among the special ones of earth."

"Yes," said the Duchess, only slightly interested. "But you can get any one you go after. Carmy. What about that sandy-haired chap who sits around all day on the deck? He seems exclusive."

"And he is! That's Titus Riggs. He's an eccentric millionaire. If we could annex him we'd be right in the heart of everything!"

"He isn't popular."

"That's his own fault. Then everybody is crazy to know him, but he won't meet many people."

This conversation had happened some days ago, and since then though Carmelita had secured an introduction, she had not succeeded in drawing Titus Riggs into her net. He had been polite but that was all. Never did he seek out the lovely Carmelita and her little friends.

They were both surprised and pleased when, as they sat with Neville on the hotel deck, Riggs rose from his chair and sauntered over to them.

"Oh, Mr. Riggs," said Carmelita, "do cheer us up a bit. We're feeling so sad over the morning's tragedy. You know, Mr. Folsom was our friend."

"Yes, I know," Riggs said. "Do you mind talking about it?"

"No," Carmelita returned, her eyes filling with tears. "not to some one who is sympathetic. Did you know Mr. Folsom?"

"Only slightly. But here comes a bellhop. He's looking for you, I think, Mr. Neville."

It was the plump youngster called Tubby, and he stepped up to Neville with his little chest puffed out, full of importance.

"Mr. Tuttle sends you this," he said, and held out his tray on which lay a telegram that had already been opened.

It was addressed to John Ross, and with a murmur of apology Neville read it.

"It's from Miss Folsom," he said. "To you, the valet. It says: 'Carry on till I arrive. Am starting at once.' It is signed A. Folsom, and it is from New York city."

"Then she ought to get here to-night," Titus Riggs said.

"Yes, she probably will," Carmelita agreed. "Riggs, will you come for a little walk with me? I feel I must have some exercise."

Neville rose at once, and leaving Riggs to the tender mercies of Helen Barnaby, the pair walked away together.

"Very stunning woman," said Titus Riggs, looking after Carmelita, and the unmistakable sincerity in his tone robbed the words of all hint of rudeness.

"Yes," agreed the Duchess. "Very clever, too. And a most staunch and loyal friend."

"Yes, she seems so. But I'm sure all your friends are that."

"Now, now, Mr. Riggs, you mustn't flatter me as you would a school girl!"

"Why not? Is there a distinction to be made in flattery?"

"I think there ought to be. A school girl can be taken in by insincere compliments."

"And can't you?"

The Duchess laughed. "Of course."

I can't. Any woman can. You're clever, Mr. Riggs."

"Yes, I am. That's my only claim to a life worth living."

"Have you no other virtues or graces?"

"None that count. But my cleverness I really bank on."

"What do you do with it—mostly?"

And then they settled down for a talk about ideals and ambitions which was mere airy persiflage on both sides, but which was amusing and gave Helen Barnaby a respite from the sadness brought about by the death of the morning.

But Carmelita was indulging in no light chatter with Roger Neville.

"Roger," she said, as soon as they were well away from the hotel. "I want you to lend me the key of Garrett Folsom's room."

"What for?" he asked bluntly.

"I want to go in there — and before his sister comes."

"You're crazy! You can't do a thing like that!"

"I must! He has something—something of mine—that I must have. I must get it."

"What?"

"Something important—never mind what. Just let me take the key for half an hour. I'll bring it right back to you. Oh, Roger—do give it to me. I must have it!"

"Carmelita, you don't realize what you're asking. I'm willing, more than willing to let you have the key, but think how it would look—for you to go into his room!"

"Nobody will see me. I'll be very careful."

"I'll get you what you want. Tell me what it is? Did you leave something in there? When?"

"Oh, no! Nothing like that! I've never been in his rooms. But he had something of mine—oh, Roger, don't torment me! Give me the key, do!"

Though they were on the crowded boardwalk, Carmelita's tones were low, and her manner, quiet. But Neville could see the underlying outbreak if he refused longer.

Unwillingly he drew a key from his pocket.

"At least, let me go with you. Or let me stand guard outside the room."

"No, that would be far worse. If any one saw us, than for me to go alone. I must do this Roger. I must! Don't worry. I'll make sure where his valet, Ross, is first and then I can slide in and out again in a few minutes."

So Neville perforce acquiesced, and after escorting her back to the hotel he put her in an elevator and himself strolled outdoors again.

Carmelita went straight to the rooms that Folsom had occupied. She did not find out first where Ross was, thinking if he were in the room she would make some excuse to ask about Miss Folsom's arrival.

There was no one in the halls and she slipped the key in the door and turned it.

Then she went in and closed the door behind her.

She found herself in the sitting room and her quick ears told her she was not alone. She felt sure she had heard a hurried footstep as she entered.

But a hasty investigation showed no other person present, and even though she looked in the bedroom and the bathroom and all the closets and wardrobes, she could see no sign of any human being but herself.

So she set to work on the search she had come for. She quickly ran through the papers and letters in the desk in the sitting room. There were not many, and the mere glance at most of them proved they were not what she sought.

With a sigh of despair she turned to the large trunk, but it was locked, and she well knew only its own key would open it.

She hurriedly ran through the contents of two or three suitcases and handbags, but was not rewarded with the treasure she sought.

About to depart, she again heard that faint sound as of somebody in the room. This time she went so far as to look under the bed, and there she saw a long slim leg in a pale colored stocking and a low shoe.

(To Be Continued)

Who it is Carmelita finds in Folsom's room? The next chapter tells that—and a startling fact about Folsom's death.

The Sash -- Then And Now!

SAINT AND SINNER

By Anne Austin

"Don't mention his name to me!" Faith cried sharply, so that the matron in the distant corner of the room looked up inquiringly.

"Not so loud, darling!" Faith put her arms about her sister. "I wish you would tell me about you—and Chris. Forgive me, dear, but I can't just ignore the fact that you are married."

"I wish to God I could!" Cherry whispered with passionate vehemence. "You know, Faith, I'm almost glad I'm shut up in jail, so I—I won't have to live with Chris. But I wouldn't—anyway. I—I'd have left him the day after the ceremony if we hadn't been arrested."

"But Cherry, darling, what is the matter?" Faith pleaded. "You were so much in love with Chris Wiley—"

"I wasn't in love with him! I wasn't in love with anybody! I found that out quickly enough—that first night with Chris. He—oh, I can't talk about it! Not even to you, Faith. Don't ask me. I hate him! I loathe him!"

"Cherry, you must talk to me," Faith commanded her sternly. "Tell me one thing. Was—was the marriage—could it be annulled?"

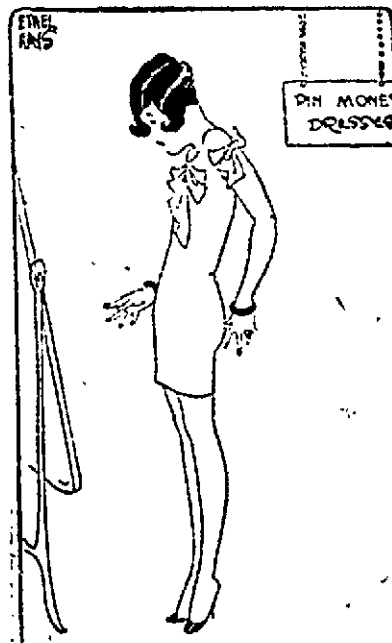

"You mean?" Cherry caught her up bravely, but her golden eyes glanced away and her cheeks crimsoned. "You mean am I truly his wife? The answer is yes. I can't ask for an annulment. But afterwards—" her voice faltered, almost died away, "he—he sickened me with him, with marriage, with all men."

"Faith," she cried, with sudden desperate need to unburden her heart, "he spent three hours before dawn telling me of all the girls and women he'd possessed. He—he bragged of his conquests, described them to me, gloated over them. He—he told me the only reason he'd married me was because I wouldn't give him a divorce. Oh, Faith, I—I wanted to kill him! Oh, that awful word—'kill'! I'll never be able to say it lightly again, as people do. But he deserves everything he's suffering now, if he is suffering, and I hope he is! I told him I'd leave him the next day and he laughed at me! He said I was too crazy about him to leave him, and that I couldn't get a divorce on those grounds—disgrace with him because he'd been wicked before he married me. But I won't live with him again, ever, and I won't take any money from him now—not if I were starving. But I can't starve here," she ended bitterly. "The county furnishes me free board and lodging, though I can't say much for the table they set. You see now, don't you, darling, why I can't buy new clothes? I've 'kicked enough' from him and Dad as it is. I don't know how you're going to get along, and you mustn't bring me any more food, or have my meals sent in. I deserve to eat prison fare for the rest of my life, for having been so selfish."

"You mustn't give way like this," Faith admonished her almost sternly. "I'm going to get you the clothes Churchhill says you'll have to have. I'll make them myself. Church all with probably like that idea—make capital of it in the newspapers—that your dresses are home-made, because the Lane family hasn't any money for ready-made clothes. May I sell your mink coat, dear?"

"Of course!" Cherry brightened instantly. "I'd forgotten that I have a marvelous trousseau that cost thou-

GODS WITH FEET OF CLAY!

BY OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

"IMPERIOUS Caesar dead and turned to clay might stop a hole to keep the wind away!" saith Shakespeare.

But the great need not die to be of the earth earthly.

One of the world's greatest singers while on tour was invited to be the guest of a family of comfortable means but who lived unpretentiously.

The hotels in the town were poor, so the lady accepted the invitation with alacrity. Enconced in her room she sent her maid to announce that she preferred to have her meals alone, and would they kindly send up her tray at ten, two and seven, and by the way would they please have English hothouse grapes for her breakfast as it was the only fruit she enjoyed.

It was a mid-western town and a thousand miles removed from "Hicks" (who can produce for you baby blue tamarinds or checked kumquats on five minutes' notice.)

No, it was the time of year when any grapes are hard to find and Madame got nothing but the plain garden variety, with the result that at the end of the second performance she boarded a train for New York without so much as a thank you to her hostess.

This story I am telling is true.

A country boy grew up to be a great man. He had resented chopping heads of chickens for the preacher on Sunday. He would mutter darkly as he dragged the axe to the chopping block, "When I'm a man I won't visit poor folks who make their little boys eat ham all week and then on Sunday just leave them the dark meat."

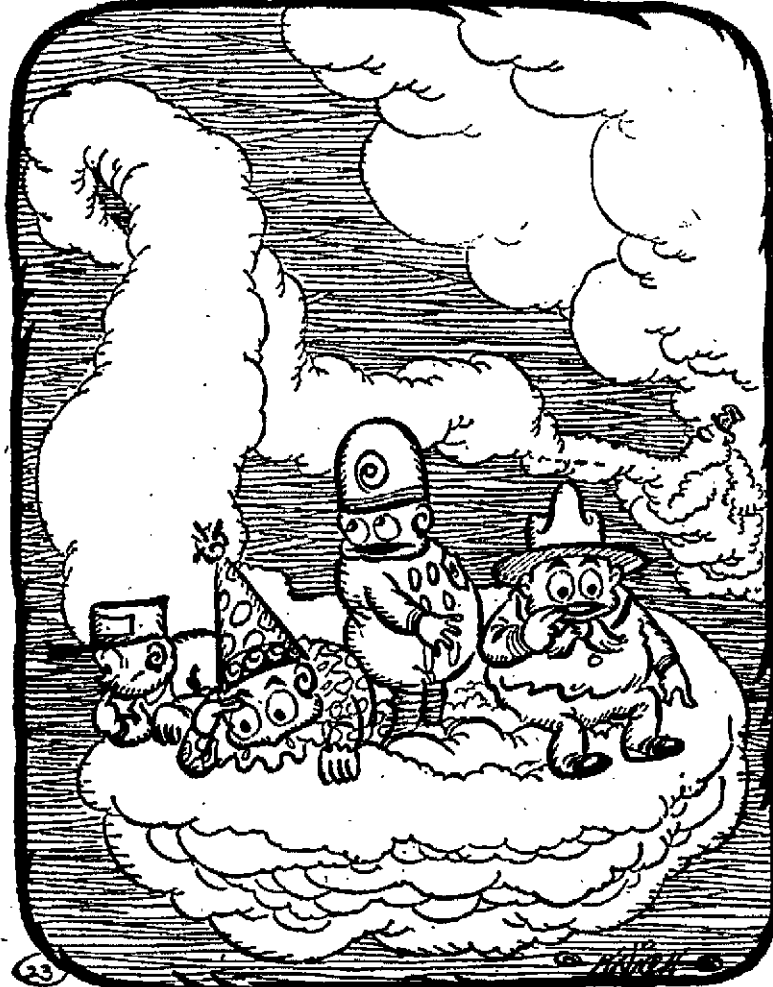

He was smart and clever and by the time he was forty he was not only a figure of national prominence but he had completely forgotten that he had ever chopped off chickens' heads for the preacher. For years everybody had been chopping off heads for him.

A society of students asked him to come and lecture for them, offering to pay his expenses. He came on an "extra fare" train and stayed at the most expensive hotel—a day longer than was necessary. On his hotel bill when he left were the following items: meals and room, forty-three dollars; valet service, six dollars; laundry, three dollars; three long distance telephone calls, nine dollars. And that wasn't the half of it. There was a five dollar box of cigars.

THE TINYMITES

By Hal Cochran

READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE

THEY sailed all night, and then at dawn they found the old Smoke Man was gone. Then Scouty shouted, "There he is, just fading out of sight." So all the Tinties watched him fade, and quite a thrilling sight it made. The Tinties promptly wondered, then, just what would be their plight.

Said Carpy, "We'll just sail around and maybe drift down to the ground as long as all this other smoke stays with us, we're all right. The only trouble is, with me, that I'm as hungry as can be. I wish that we would land some place so I could get a bite."

Then quiet settled o'er the crowd. Till someone shouted, right out loud "Oh, look! Our sail of smoke is acting very queer. It seems it's waving to and fro. Perhaps it too, is going to go, and if it does we'll have no way of sailing on. I fear."

The smoke sail wavered in the breeze and then with quite apparent case, it started drifting through the air, and soon could not be seen. Woe Coppy said, "I told you so. I knew that sail was bound to go. I think the Smoke Man leaving us was really rather mean."

And then the smoke on which they rode began to sink down with its load and the Tinties, tumbling to the center of the thing, "Ho, ho," said Clowny, "bless my soul. Our smoke is shaped just like a bowl. I'm glad because I rather feel much safer in this thing."

At first they all seemed rather dazed, but soon climbed to the edge and gazed out into open space so they could see what was around "Oh, look, we're starting now to drop," said Clowny. "Maybe when we stop, we'll be but out of the air again, and down on solid ground."

(The Tinties find a new land in the next story.)

Love Letters Of The Great

AS COMPILED BY DIANA RICE

BISMARCK—1815-1896

If Bismarck wrote love letters to other women than his wife, they have not been, very carefully preserved; but his letters to Johanna von Puttkamer, whom he afterward married, fill a large volume. From its first to last page this volume in full of the tenderest love and solicitation.

That this "man of iron" found time even through his most strenuous years to write to the woman he loved often and at length, shows to what extent she filled his life. His first thought whether in the field or at the brilliant court of foreign embassies, was always of his little family.

And he uses over and over again in all his letters the same phrase "our separation is a misfortune."

Bismarck to Fraulein Von Puttkamer, Schonhausen, Feb. 1, 1847.

I have only waited for daylight to write to you, my dear heart, and with the light came your little green snuffbox to make my lukewarm water scotch. . . . After I had spent the morning in useful rather agreeable, sands of dollars! And not a garment worn! Maybe you can find a bride—but I keep forgetting what I am now," she wailed bitterly. "No bride would wear clothes made for Cherry Lane, the murderess!"

black sun is false. Are you rather a dark, warm summer night, with fragrance of flowers and heat-lightening?—for I should hardly like to say a starry and moonlight night; that picture seems to me too monotonously placid. I have been bargaining for horses the whole morning, and I behaved like the women at Siegmund's or Regie's. After I had made the dealer lead before me about twenty in the maddest rain on smooth ice, I bought nothing, although they were all Danish horses. Speaking of horses, it occurs to me that you must ride, even if I must turn into a horse and carry you. Your letter of the 12th gave me quite uncommon pleasure; in the first place, because I am not such a spoiled creature as you are, and I dare to hope that I should have a reply so early as Sunday to my letter. Further, I notice with special satisfaction that your letter to me is in the years of increase. When I first saw it, it was one leaf in size; the next time it was two, and now it is three. Let it keep growing.

SEVEN THOUSAND DOLLARS WILL BUILD HOME WITH SUN PARLOR AND ALL MODERN CONVENIENCES

SEVEN thousand dollars for a home as spacious, light airy and well-arranged as this excellent model, which its designers call "The Davenport," is about as cheap as houses come these days.

Visualize your furnishings in the rooms diagrammed on the plan! How hospitable the living room would be, with its large open fire place and stream of daylight from its two windows and the large double door of the sun parlor.

And the dining room, here so conveniently close to the living room, with an adjoining breakfast nook. Also, the second floor and its two spacious bedrooms, commodious closets and living sewing room.

An adequate answer for a question to which in these hustle-and-bustle days it is not always easy to find a reply: What is HOME?

If you wish details of the structure or other information about this house write The Standard Homes Corporation, Colorado Building, Washington, D. C.

NORMA TELLS HOW TO MAKE GOOD SALAD

NORMA TALMADGE

THERE is an old French saying that it requires love, passion and remorse to make a good salad.

If that is true, it is no wonder that Norma Talmadge is well known in the screen celebrities' colony in Hollywood for her ability as a "saladist."

Her emotions have been known to carry her through the making of many perfect salads. One of them for instance, is called ginger ale salad, though few have been able to identify its strange flavor.

THE SECRET

Here is Miss Talmadge's recipe for it:

Dissolve 2 tablespoons of gelatine in 1-1/2 cup of cold water, and pour over it 1 of boiling water. Strain and add 2 cups of ginger ale, 1 cup of sugar, the juice of 1 lemon and 1 orange, and 2 tablespoons of pineapple juice. Add 1 cup of berries, 1 cup of pitted cherries, and 1-1/2 cup of chopped blanched almonds.

Place in molds and chill. Serve in hearts of lettuce with French dressing. Your guests will love it, devour it passionately and never feel any remorse for having done so!

SISTER Mary's KITCHEN

BY SISTER MARY

BREAKFAST—Stewed dried apricots, boiled rice with thin cream, ham toast, crisp graham toast, milk, coffee.

LUNCHEON—Macaroni and cheese baked with tomatoes, brown bread and butter, maple gelatine, milk, tea.

DINNER—Baked meat loaf, scalloped potatoes, buttered kale, grape fruit and orange salad, date and nut puff, whole wheat bread, milk, coffee.

Very often a meat dish is vastly improved by the contrasting flavor of a tart jelly or spiced preserves. In this particular dinner the meat loaf, which is made of veal and ham, gains much in spiced grapes or red raspberry jelly accompanies it. The small dish of jelly adds an attractive bit of color to the dinner table, too, which worth while.

MAPLE GELATINE
One tablespoon granulated gelatine, 4 tablespoons cold water, 3/4 cup boiling water, 1 cup maple syrup, 2 eggs (whites), 1/2 teaspoon salt.

Soften gelatine in cold water. Let stand ten minutes. Add boiling water and stir until dissolved. Let stand until cool. Put unbeaten whites of eggs, salt, maple syrup and tepid gelatine into a deep bowl and beat with a Dover beater until stiff. Turn into a mold first dipped in cold water to chill. Serve with a boiled custard made with the yolks of the eggs.

Household Hints

CHEESE FOR DESSERT
Fresh fruit and crackers spread with cream cheese make a welcome change from the more elaborate desserts.

DATE MUFFINS
Shredded dates added to bran batter will make delicious and nourishing muffins for the children's school lunches.

WASH CURTAINS
If curtains contain any starch, wash them before putting away for the summer. Starch left in the fabric will rot it.

Partners

The wife cheerfully goes without a new dress or hat to help a man pay for the home they have built.

The wife is a dependable partner when paying for a home. That's one reason a home is a safe investment—a prime collateral.

The "moral hazard" in home financing is the best because the partners are in perfect accord—she saves, to apply on the home, what he earns.

Homes are not speculation ventures. They are, nine times in ten, built with but one object—the protection and comfort of the family.

"The man who assists a renter to become a homeowner is a public benefactor."

We have plans of many charming homes of moderate cost to show those who would build.

How To Play Bridge

By Milton C. Work

(Readers of The Post-Crescent are invited to send their bridge problems to the Bridge Editor of The Post-Crescent and they will be forwarded to Mr. Work, author of these bridge articles. Mr. Work will answer every letter.)

THE POINTER FOR TODAY IS:

When the suit to be bid contains more strength than one quick trick but less than two quick tricks, it should not be called without some side strength; that side strength need not necessarily be a quick trick.

The advice to bid a suit initially without what seems to be two quick tricks in the hand, involves what in one way is an exception to a rule, and in another way is merely an affirmation of it.

A hand which does not contain two actual quick tricks, but has compensating strength in other ways, is obviously too strong to pass; it being dangerous to pass, for fear a game hand may be passed out. To illustrate: a King with one or two small may or may not take a trick; the Ace may be adversely held and, if so, it is an even chance that it will be on the right of the King. In the same way, Ace-Queen, with the King adversely held, has an even chance of finding the adverse King on the right and taking an extra trick in addition to the Ace. In the first case, with the Ace in partner's hand, and in the second, with the King in the hand, the doubtful card must win unless trumped. It is therefore conservative to reckon two such partial chances as equal to a whole one; but it is not wise to depend altogether on partial chances because, when all go wrong, the result may be disastrous. The hand should contain at least one actual quick trick, and it is generally essential that it be in the suit to be bid. For example, it would be sound to bid an Ace-Queen-Ten five-card suit with a side King, or an Ace-Queen suit with a side King-Jack; but reversing the holding, a King-x-x-x-x suit or a King-Jack-x-x-x suit, neither of which contains an actual quick trick, should not be bid without two sure tricks on the side, and Ace-Queen does not measure up to the requirement.

Tomorrow we will consider the following hands:
1. Sp: King-Jack-x-x-x Ht: Ace-x-x-x Cl: x-x-x
2. Sp: King-Jack-x-x-x Ht: Ace-Queen-x Di: x-x-x Cl: x-x
3. Sp: King-Jack-x-x-x Ht: Ace-King-x Di: x-x-x Cl: x-x

Ready to Put Team into Field

Kaukauna—Kaukauna was given a permanent franchise in the Fox River Valley baseball league at a meeting of league representatives at the Conway hotel at Appleton Sunday afternoon. Kaukauna was represented by John Coppes. Other cities represented at the meeting were Oshkosh, Neenah, Menasha, Appleton, Kimberly and Green Bay. It was decided to make the circuit an eight team loop but no definite action was taken on who the eighth member would be. Omo and Combined Locks asked for franchises in the league as did several other southern Wisconsin teams but the league decided to wait a few days before deciding upon the team. Combined Locks was not admitted Sunday because there was some discussion as to whether Combined Locks was included in the territory covered by the Kimberly franchise. Several Kimberly players also are members of the Combined Locks team and if the mill men get a franchise Kimberly will have to look for several more players. There was some discussion at the meeting of creating another circuit in Winnebago and Fond du Lac counties. This circuit would be affiliated with the Fox River Valley league.

The Kaukauna by-laws committee and the financial committee will meet Wednesday evening at John Coppes' place and make plans for the local team for the coming year. Mr. Coppes said Sunday that Kaukauna was all set for the season.

LITTLE CHUTE HIGH TEAM DEFEATED BY
ALUMNI CAGE SQUADHigh School Seconds Beat
Shorty's Shoes 19 to 0 in Preliminary

Special to Post-Crescent.
Little Chute—The Little Chute high school Purple and Gold basketball squad lost its seventh game this season when it was defeated by the Little Chute Alumni team at Legion hall Friday evening by a score of 17-13.

The high school team had the lead until the last quarter when the opponents staged a last minute rally and came through with two field goals while the high school made but one free throw. The floor was slippery and it was a slow game.

The high school squad started out with neat passing by the Versteegen forwards, Vanden Bergs center and Captain Versteegen. The Alumni team was composed of some very strong material with "Dud" Courchaine of the Kimberly-Clark Athletics, Van Handle and Miron of Shorty's Shoes and Weyenberg, Sanders and Schommer formerly of the Little Chute Legion squad. Courchaine was the star player of the alumni team and also high scorer of the fray with four field goals to his credit and Captain Versteegen of the high school team was close second with three field goals. Vanden Berg followed with two field goals and one free throw.

A dance followed the game and dance. The high school team has one more game to play with Weyauwega before it will go to enter the Ripon supplementary tournament, March 17, 18 and 19. The lineup:

Alumni—Courchaine, rg.; Schommer, lf.; Sanders, c.; Miron (Capt.) rg.; Van Handle, lg.; Weyenberg, lg.

High school—R. Versteegen, rf.; G. denberg, rg.; Versteegen, (Capt.) lg.; denberg, rg.; Versteegen, (Capt.) lg.

Referee—Haugen, Kimberly.

The preliminary game played between the second high school team and Shorty's Shoes at Little Chute was one of the roughest games ever witnessed on the local floor. It was a one sided game and ended with a score of 19 to 0 in favor of the high school team.

Because of a slippery floor many fouls were committed. Peeters was high scorer with two field goals and five free throws. The scores:

Shorty's Shoes—Weyenberg, r. f.; Versteegen, l. f.; Jansen, c.; Jansen, r. g.; Lammers, l. g.

High school—Vandenheuvel, r. g.; Widenberg, l. g.; Harties, c.; DeBruin, r. g.; Peeters, l. g.

That seems to be the favorite prescription for an ailment that is common in this country, according to a doctor who wrote to the British Medical Journal to ask about the affliction. APPLETON HIGH CAGERS TAKE REVENGE ON NEENAH, 23 TO 17

Shieldsmen Take Fast Neighbors To Beating In Hard-Fought Battle

Laird, Lutz Lead Orange to Closely-contested Win Over Reds

Revenge for a beating at Neenah earlier in the season was taken by Coach Joseph Shields' Appleton high cagers Saturday evening at Army G when they downed the Neenah high squad by a score of 23-17. The game was always in doubt until the final period. Appleton would take a lead only to have it cut down to a point or two by a fighting Neenah team, which displayed a speedy drive.

The Neenah five presented a team composed of juniors and sophomores, with one exception, a rangy five which will rank with the best in the state in another year. Coach Shields opened with a lineup composed of Laird, Lutz, Murphy, Moore and Pfeiffer, but sent his regulars, Strutz, Capt. Steinberg and Kunitz into the fray before the game was over, saving them from two full hard games in two days.

For Appleton Lutz, Moore and Laird played the best game. Lutz showed his usual skill and shooting ability, though showing the effects of a hard game the evening before in the early periods when he was erratic. However, he found the hoop four times for nice shot. Laird played the entire game on a crippled ankle and though it slowed up the teamwork of the Orangemen considerably at times in starts down the floor he managed to cage three baskets and four of five free tries to lead his mates with 10 points. Moore, playing his first real game since he pulled a tendon, showed up well at running guard, carrying the ball to his forwards in fine style and exhibiting the most speed of any man on the floor, though having tough luck at the meeting. Appleton used nine players.

For Neenah the play of Schneller, Tyriver and Mielke featured. Schneller led his mates with three baskets and a pair of free tries and Tyriver got the only other marker besides playing a good all-around game. The game Appleton led at quarter, 7-4, but was outscored 8-1, the second period to hold a 5-7 margin at the half over Jorgenson's fighting crew. Another sport placed the Orange ahead 16-12 at the third period's close and they outscored the invaders by a basket the final period.

Neenah opened the scoring by two free throws made by Tyriver and Schneller on fouls by Moore, Elhrgott missed a try on Murphy's foul and then Laird broke the ice for Appleton with a ringer from the free throw line. Murphy missed a try on Haase's foul and Tyriver dropped a basket to give Neenah a lead. Moore tied the score with a basket and Laird added a free throw on Elhrgott's foul. He also dropped another ringer to give Appleton a 7-4 lead as the quarter ended.

Laird opened the new period by dropping a shot on Johnson's foul and Johnson returned the favor on Laird's personal. Schneller dropped a neat basket and Strutz missed a try on Schneller's foul. The half ended 8-7 for Appleton.

Schneller gave Neenah a lead with a basket to open the third period. Lutz scored a ringer for Appleton and Mielke missed a throw on Strutz' foul. Schneller scored his third straight and final basket to give Neenah its last lead of the game, 11-10 and then split even on two throws on Steinberg's foul to take the 12-10 lead.

Laird missed a try on Mielke's foul and then tied the score with two on another by Mielke. Strutz dropped a hard try from the sidelines near mid-floor and then Lutz intercepted a Neenah pass in Red territory and dribbled under the hoop for a speedy basket. The quarter ended 15-12 for Appleton. Haase scored a point on Laird's foul and Mielke missed one on Kunitz. Haase added another on Johnson's foul and the score stood 15-14.

Mielke missed a throw on Johnson's foul and Lutz scored a basket. Radke scored a try on Kunitz's foul and Laird came back with another basket. Gaertner split even on two throws on Steinberg's foul and Johnson did the same on Gaertner's personal. Lutz dropped the final ringer.

Cut And Slash Style May Be On Wane In Major Leagues

BY BILLY EVANS

Is the cut and slash style of play on the wane in the major leagues? In the parlance of baseball, the cut and slash system is the taking of a healthy cut by a majority of the batters at every pitch that looks good.

Babe Ruth, favored by the lively ball, might aptly be referred to as the originator of the slam-bang methods that have dominated baseball for at least a half dozen years.

After a period in which the pitchers completely dominated the situation, fanfare welcomed a change and the healthy swing stuff became decidedly popular. There is still something about a Babe Ruth home run that thrills, but the enthusiasm over the ordinary slugs has died out considerably.

During the past winter I have discussed the slugging of the game with about 10 major league leaders, equally divided between the two big leagues.

The consensus is, that baseball is certain to be featured by a more consistent running play to be made to capitalize to the greatest extent possible on the speed of each player.

While it doesn't necessarily mean that a lot of bases are again to be stolen, it is evident that speed will be utilized in every way possible in the garnering of runs.

The hit and run, also what might be called the run and hit play, have always been popular with certain managers, but a number of others have

4 BROTHERS STAR AT POLO AT MIAMI

Firestone Brothers form Team to Compete in Polo at Miami Beach

Miami Beach, Fla.—Four sons of Harvey S. Firestone, the tire manufacturer, form a polo team here.

The Firestone brothers—Russell, Leonard, Harvey, Jr., and Raymond—are to make their first appearance as a complete Firestone team under the colors of the Chagrin Valley Hunt Club of Cleveland.

Harvey and Russell learned their polo at Princeton; Raymond and Leonard at Miami Beach.

The Firestones use bronchos, trained to ride on plans as mounts. The bronchos were once used to rope cattle and says the youngest Firestone, learn quickly the steps essential to polo.

Their play as individuals here has caused favorable comment from followers of the sport.

KOHLER BEATS CHAIRS TO GIVE K-C'S CHANCE

Kimberly—Louie Loose and his Kohler lead hand the Sheboygan American Legion squad 29 to 21, trimming at the new Eagles hall in Sheboygan. This win for Kohler over Sheboygan put the K. C. Athletics of Kimberly just two games behind the league leaders. Should Sheboygan lose a game to either West Bend, Manitowish or Fond du Lac and Kimberly come through with wins the rest of the season, the Papermakers will be in a tie for first place.

and just before the game ended Radke scored a point on Kunitz's misfire.

SECONDS WIN AGAIN

The Orange seconds added another win to their long string after it was thought that an overtime period would be necessary. Both teams started slowly and in a low-scoring, defensive game the score stood 6-6 with less than two minutes to go. A sudden Appleton spurt netted a free try and two ringers and won the game 11-6. Bob Kunitz and Rafoth played the best games for the local boys.

Of the latter day managers, Eddie Collins has followed most closely in the footsteps of McGraw. There is no doubt in my mind but that much of the success the White Sox enjoyed under Collins was because he never failed to call on his speed whenever it seemed like the proper play.

It is also reasonable to suppose that the eight new managers, five in the American and three in the National, will add zest to the race. One certain way to do it is to increase the running.

Bill Carrigan, new manager of the Red Sox, was strong for the style of play when he was winning pennants for Boston. George Moriarty, a great base-runner in his day, as leader of the Detroit Tigers is sure to favor an offense featuring speed. Likewise Ray Schalk, Donie Bush and the rest of the de butting managers.

Of course, the ball is still too lively to make a one-run margin worth while. Pilfering bases is a one-run stunt, hence that form of baserunning will remain taboo. A running attack, however, is another thing, and I am sure we can look for a revival of that style of play.

ONE STAR MAY AID CLUB TO WIN FLAG

Many Trades of 1926-27 Should Make Races Close in Major Loops

BY BILLY EVANS

The addition of one star player often transforms a good ball club into a pennant winner.

By the same line of reasoning, the addition of two star players should positively guarantee a championship.

Never before in the history of baseball has there been such a wholesale shift of players as during the winter of 1926-27.

Trading of outstanding stars, more or less a rarity in the off season, has been a common happening since the close of the 1926 campaign. A number of clubs in both major leagues hope to profit from these trades.

It has been two years since John McGraw won a pennant for New York in the National League. That is a long time for John to be in the championship background. Pittsburgh turned him back in 1925 while St. Louis, a dark horse, went over last season.

When clubs managed by John McGraw which he regards as pennant possibilities fail to win for him, he begins to change faces. McGraw doesn't believe in sinking each year with the same old team.

This year two of the biggest stars in the National League will try to supply the Giants with some of the punch in the field and the bat that they have lacked for two seasons in an effort to finish in front. They are none other than the great Rogers Hornsby and the brilliant Eddie Roush.

Three years ago McGraw thought Frankie Firsch the greatest ball player in the National League. He apparently has weakened on Frisch, since he went to the Cardinals in the trade for Hornsby. McGraw, who is seldom wrong in his baseball deductions, figures Hornsby will be more valuable than Frisch.

A weakness in the outfield has for several years handicapped the Giants. In an effort to remedy this fault the Giant manager parted with George Kelly to procure the brilliant veteran, Eddie Roush. Ten years ago Roush played a brief engagement with the Giants and was passed on to Cincinnati, where he became one of the greatest outfielders in the game. He comes to the Giants with his best days behind him but he is still a marvelous performer.

Will Rogers Hornsby and Eddie Roush give to the Giants a pennant punch? Manager McGraw thinks so. To the contrary, Bob O'Farrell, who succeeded Hornsby as manager of the Cardinals, feels that Frisch will be able to fill the bill at second and help the world champs repeat.

Someone is going to be disappointed on that score, there can be only one pennant winner.

In the American League, three of the biggest stars in the organization, Cobb, Collins and Speaker, have changed clubs.

Connie Mack feels that Cobb and Collins will add the required initiative, poise and brains to put the Athletics back in the position from which they could be shaken only by a sharp reversal of their season's form in the two games remaining on their schedule. Defeat, however, might write "fines" to their championship hopes. It would drop them in to a second place tie with Indiana, with Purdue assuming the leadership.

The other conference games Monday night will be between Illinois and Wisconsin, offering the Wisconsin team a chance to rise to a second place tie, no matter what the outcome of the Purdue-Michigan games.

The gala night on the conference basketball schedule will be Saturday of this week when every Big Ten team engages in competition. The season ends a week later.

ENTRIES FOR LEGION MEET CLOSE MARCH 5

Saturday, March 5 is the closing date for the state American Legion pin meet which will be held here later in March, according to Secretary Walter Schultz. All entry blanks for the meet must be in Secretary Schultz's hands at that time or they will not be entered in the tourney.

JIMMY DELANEY, RING STAR, IS NEAR DEATH

Minneapolis, Minn.—(AP)—Little hope was held out Monday for the recovery of Jimmy Delaney, St. Paul, light heavyweight boxer, who has blood poisoning in his left arm. He has undergone two operations and submitted to a blood transfusion since being admitted to a local hospital last week. His condition became worse Sunday night.

Delaney splintered a bone in his left arm during a fight with Maxie Rosenberg at Cincinnati two weeks ago and it became infected.

Madison—State interscholastic athletics will again be in the foreground next month with the arrival of the basketball tournament, which will be held at the University of Wisconsin gymnasium March 24, 25 and 26, to decide the state cage championship.

Under the direction of Coach Guy M. Sundt, University representative for the High School Board of Control, plans are already being made for the basketball meet, the first of a series of interscholastic activities to take place at the University during the coming month.

Following the completion of the district tournaments which will be held in the 16 high school districts on March 9 to 12, the winners in each district will come to Madison the last weekend in March for the annual state tournament to decide the champion of the 16 high school districts of the state.

Present arrangements call for a series of 27 basketball games to be held during the four day tourney held in the championship and consolation divisions. The final day of playing will decide the state championship team, and will be followed by a banquet given for all the participating players in the tournament.

The interscholastic tennis tournament as well as the swimming and track contests are also being considered by the High School Board of Control at present. The date of the tournament have been placed for May 20 and 21 a week ahead of the usual time, but the interscholastic meets are held because of the high school conference which will be held at the latter date.

Interest in the interscholastic meets sponsored by the Board of Control is anticipated to be as great as it has been in past years by Director Guy Sundt. Having sponsored the events held at the University for the past three years, High School officials, who have marked the recent events will be shown in this year's activities of the competing high schools to be greater than ever before. Attractive trophies are to be awarded the winners of the basketball tournament as well as outdoor events which will take place in May.

The High School Board of Control, which is the guiding force in planning the interscholastic meets, is composed of the following men:

V. G. Barnes, Madison, chairman; D. F. Neversman, Marinette, secretary; Supt. Robert Mosher, Cumberland; Supt. Henry E. Smith, Antigo; Supt. F. V. Forwell, Platteville; Principal G. A. Chamberlain, Milwaukee.

BADGERS HAVE CHANCE FOR SECOND-PLACE TIE

Chicago—(AP)—The University of Michigan Monday night faces its big chance to make permanent her Big Ten basketball leadership. By beating Purdue the Wolverines would place themselves in a position from which they could be shaken only by a sharp reversal of their season's form in the two games remaining on their schedule. Defeat, however, might write "fines" to their championship hopes. It would drop them in to a second place tie with Indiana, with Purdue assuming the leadership.

The other conference games Monday night will be between Illinois and Wisconsin, offering the Wisconsin team a chance to rise to a second place tie, no matter what the outcome of the Purdue-Michigan games.

The gala night on the conference basketball schedule will be Saturday of this week when every Big Ten team engages in competition. The season ends a week later.

BEARS PLAN SPEED ATTACK NEXT FALL

Styles of Rockne, Warner to Be Adopted by California in 1927

Berkeley, Calif.—Speed and deception a la Pop Warner and Knute Rockne will replace the football style of the late Andy Smith at California next fall.

One can look for the change in the style of play of the Golden Bears even if the aspirations of "Nibs" Price, youthful California mentor, materialize.

The Smith style of play, which already has made the Bears the district path before the untimely death of Smith, failed to achieve any success for Price this past fall.

The Golden Bears were defeated six times. Price says it will be different next fall. Most of the youthful players schooled in the Smith style of play are gone. In their places are youthful aspirants willing to partake of whatever style Price teaches.

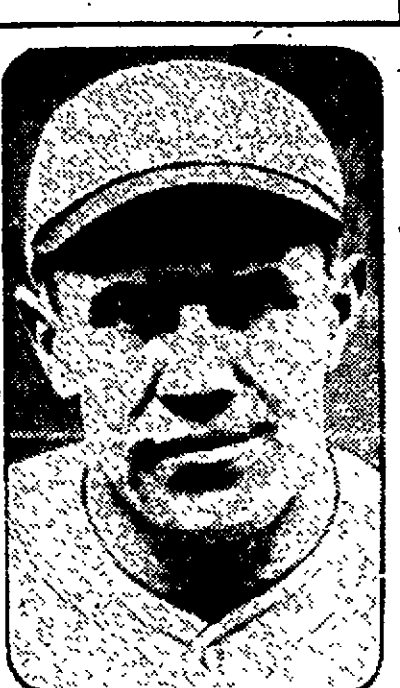

They are good prospects, too, those youngsters from whom will come the 1927 eleven. Only a few of them have any varsity experience, but Price feels they will come through satisfactorily.

California schedule makers apparently agree with him. They are planning to have the Golden Bears outfit take part in a post-season game next fall against a strong eastern eleven. To do that, California must win this fall.

California lost six games last fall. It will hardly lose that many games this fall, nor half that many, if Price's premises are correct.

HERMAN LAYNE

Herman Layne, Pittsburgh rookie from Toronto, is one of the speediest players trying to break in the major loops this year. Layne gets away from the right side of the plate. He got a trial with Detroit once, but failed to make the grade. Because of his consistent hitting and marvelous speed, he may stick 't season with the Bucs.

New York—(AP)—America's foremost indoor athletes will race the boards of Madison square garden Monday night in quest of twelve individual track and field championships of the National Amateur Athletic union. Eleven titleholders crowned at the annual games last year have entered. Edwin Wide, Swedish conqueror of Bayo Vurni, will appear in a handicap 1500 meter event. A Sabir Carr, premier American vaulter will try to scale 14 feet in the pole vault for the first time in history. The Yale junior shattered the indoor mark by clearing 12 feet 9 3/4 inches at the New York A. C. recently.

Twelve of the best handicap mllers of the Metropolitan district have been entered in the 1500-meter event. A speedy field will face the gun in the sprint events.

George Guthrie of Illinois, A. C. and Dan Kinsey, of Chicago, A. A. will tackle the high fences against several Eastern college hurdlers in the 70-yard event. Herbert Schwarzs of the University of Wisconsin, and John Kuck, of Kansas City teachers college, are expected to prove the class of the shot putters.

GETS $7500 A YEAR

Dick Hanley, Northwestern's new grid mentor, was obtained by the Purple school for a salary of $7500 a year under a long term contract. Hanley will be the "babe" of the Big Ten coaches. He is only 32.

Arbor changed their minds for them to the tune of 30 to 26.

The hope of the Meanwellites lies entirely in their ability to stop Capt. "Pur" Daugherty. Not only is the dashing Illini leader the most dangerous scoring forward in the league, but he is the key to the Ruby attack. He leads nearly all offensive drives with his smashing dribble and clever floor work.

The Badgers will feel the loss of the elongated Elmer Tonhop, who was left at home due to injuries received in the Ohio game at Columbus. While Miller is the equal of the Cleveland center defensively, he lacks the experience needed to dovetail nicely with the Meanwell short-pass attack.

SEVEN TEAMS PLAY IN '27 VALLEY LOOP

Ball Moguls Decide to Have Odd Number, Leaving One Date Open

Seven teams will take the field in the Fox River Valley Baseball league this summer in place of the six-team circuit of last year, it was decided at a meeting of loop officials and team managers at the Conway hotel Sunday afternoon. Fond du Lac dropped from the loop a few weeks ago at the initial meeting and Kaukauna and Menasha immediately applied for the vacant berth. Menasha was admitted but Kaukauna's application was held up while loop managers were attempting to get an eighth team from a nearby city to complete an even-numbered loop.

Sunday Kaukauna was formally admitted to the loop, but though there were several representatives of other nearby cities eager for the other franchise the loop heads decided to let it go at seven teams this year, rather than take a chance on a two-team increase which may be made in 1928. Though the visiting magnates went home disappointed, the present managers were not to be deterred by the off postponed games. This can be used for playing postponed games, if possible, and for feature exhibitions with star traveling teams. In case of a rainy season like last summer, the extra days would come in handy to work off postponed games. These dragged for months last season.

Another discussion of Saturday-Sunday ball was held but no definite steps were taken as yet. A president to succeed C. L. Prefontaine, resigned, also was not chosen.

Representatives at the meeting included C. A. Baetz, Appleton; L. O. Cooke, Kimberly; Joseph Clusman, Green Bay; Arthur Larson, Neenah; Bruce Noel, Oshkosh; T. E. McGillan, Menasha; John Coppes, Kaukauna.

THETA PHI CAGE FIVE TAKES FRAT LEAD

Theta Phi fraternity basketballers broke the tie for first place in the 1927 Lawrence college interfraternity cage loop Saturday afternoon when they took the Delta Iota squad into camp, 10-3, at Alexander gymnasium. Before the game both teams had clean sheets. With the schedule ending this week, the Theta Phi practically clinched the campus title unless there is an upset in the final game, which is with the stray third-place Sig Zeks.

The D. I. men scored the first three points and then failed to find the basket after that. The score at the half was 6-3 for the Thetas.

The three games will be the final battles of five of Christophs' veterans, Heideman, Bries, and Sund, three-year men and Capt. Grove and Clark, two-year men. All will see plenty of service in the final games along with Hillman and Hilton, sophoms, and Slavik, a freshman. Bries is an all-Midwest guard choice and Heideman is a four-letter man.

600 ASKED TO RELAYS

Ohio State University has asked more than 600 high school college track teams to participate in the fourth annual Ohio relays. The relays will be held in Columbus, O., April 28.

APPLETON TEAM FIFTH IN STATE ELK TOURNEY

The Salmon team of the Appleton Elk League rolled into fifth place in the team event of the state Elk pin meet at Oshkosh Sunday with a score of 2663. David Smith is captain of the team. The Marx Stars, another Appleton five, captained by Louis Keller, also took the drives and rolled a 2530 score.

Dr. A. J. Frawley of Appleton leads the singles and Frank Fries is third in the averages. In the doubles, Frank and William Fries are in fifth place.

CHAMBER TO FETE HONOR EMPLOYEES OF VALLEY FIRMS

Industrial Committee Completes Arrangements at Meeting Last Week

Final plans for the dinner for honoring men who have worked continuously for 25 years for any Fox river valley firm were completed at a meeting of the industrial committee of the chamber of commerce Friday. The dinner will be held in Castle hall on March 30, cooperating with the final meeting and dinner of the Foreman's Safety school.

Both groups will hold dinners at 6 o'clock and each will have a program. After the dinners the 25 year veterans will receive gold embossed buttons, the men who have attended five or more meetings of the safety school will receive diplomas. At 7:45 both groups will combine on the second floor of the hall where they will hear a talk by J. H. Hudson of Chicago, an officer of the Illinois state chamber of commerce. Mr. Hudson spoke at a recent forum meeting of the chamber.

Last year 108 men representing 13 industries were eligible for the veteran's dinner and it is expected that at least 150 will be present this year. The meeting was a decided success last year as a new venture. Every firm of the valley has been requested to send its list of 25-year men to Hugh G. Corbett, chamber secretary. The names were placed in the program. Three committees of the industrial committee were selected to prepare for the event. R. H. Purdy and Hugh G. Corbett will prepare designs for the veteran employes buttons, secure the buttons, and take care of the invitations and publicity for the meeting. J. L. Sensenbrenner and John H. Jennings are in charge of the program. A. H. Thuermer and William Palatich will prepare the proposition to the employers in an attempt to get a large attendance. The Pythian Sisters will serve the dinner.

A discussion of the proposed increase in freight rates requested by carriers in the truck line to the valley was held by the committee. Roy G. Wort, traffic manager of the chamber, told of the work already completed in Appleton and in Wisconsin by the Traffic Managers association to combat the proposed raise. Mr. Corbett suggested that in the future contributions for various charities be made to the chamber of commerce instead of to solicitors. In case the contributions are made direct to the chamber, the cause for which they are given will receive the entire amount, while if a solicitor takes the money he gets 35 per cent as his commission and the cause gets the rest. He quoted specifically the case of the Wisconsin Citizens Military Training Camp fund, to which many local and valley mills contribute large amounts yearly. The money is paid to a professional solicitor who gets the commission and sends the rest to the camp fund.

MILWAUKEE MEN TOP STATE K. C. TOURNEY

Pond du Lac—(49)—H. Motowski, Milwaukee, led into the singles lead of the eleventh annual tournament of the Wisconsin Knights of Columbus Bowling association here Sunday night with a score of 659. Thirty-four of Milwaukee's leading fraternal teams invaded the tournament here Saturday and Sunday and replaced many of the leaders.

The Western Motor Supply team went into second place in the team event with a score of 2,817. E. E. Esline, captain of the Esline Steel builders of Milwaukee occupied the all-events lead Monday with a total count of 1,338. Maurert and Esline, another Milwaukee combination, went into second in the doubles with a score of 1,221.

BELOIT STARTS WORK FOR SPRING FOOTBALL

Beloit—Preparations for the spring football practice began this week, when all men expecting to turn out for the 1927 team met with Coach Bohler in order to arrange for definite periods of instruction.

The coach is sponsoring a new system in getting the men to report at this early date for indoor tutoring until the weather permits working outdoors. All men in gymnasium classes who plan on reporting for football did so at the regular gym hour.

Bohler will impart gridiron knowledge to his proteges on Monday, Wednesday and Friday, three sections, and on Tuesday and Thursday in one section. He has announced that all men intending to play football next fall must report for these early workouts.

LITTLE MAY REALIZE PLAY FOR ALL DREAM

If the University of Wisconsin builds a new Recreation Hall and Field house so as to provide "athletics for all," it will be mainly because of the untiring efforts of George K. Little, Badger athletic director. From the looks of present plans, Little's dream, which has also been the dream of thousands of Wisconsin students, may soon be realized.

BY ALICE ROHE
Rome—"Four years from today I will meet you here."
My rendezvous is with—Benito Mussolini, the most spectacular figure in modern history!

With the quick movement which characterizes him, Italy's Fascist Premier springs up, grasps a photograph of himself, goes to his desk and, with a decisive sweep of the pen, writes my name, Rome, the date, and—adds to my pleasurable surprise, "Devotement Mussolini." (Devotedly Mussolini.)

I looked at him, appreciating his memory of people. For the last time I had talked with Mussolini when he was just before the march on Rome when the world did not realize that this blacksmith's son held the destiny of Italy in his hands.

"Only," he continues, "You must not wait that long—come and see me before then."

The four-years-hence rendezvous is made by Mussolini when I speak of his miraculous escapes from repeated attempts on his life.
CAESAR'S BUST
"Oh, I have forgotten, all about them," he replies with a wave of his hand. "It will be here four years from today to receive you."

Over his head the bust of Julius Caesar, whom he emulates, forced an inevitable comparison. Mussolini's forceful head sits upon a powerful neck. His face, despite the continued reports of his bad health, shows no traces of illness. It is dominating, imperious and imperial, and of great nervous activity. It changes completely when he smiles and reveals, beneath sensuous lips, flashing white teeth.

He asks me what I think of the changes in Rome and Italy under Fascism, and becomes the interviewer. Personally I am interested in the changes in Mussolini himself. The very elegant figure in correct afternoon clothes recalls the rather ordinary brown suit and brown derby hat of an individual too busy four years ago to bother about "what the well-dressed man should wear." Today, this busy dictator finds clothes well worth bothering over. Also, I find his manner changed. He is gallant, almost suave at times.

I do not think of these things when the door to the great office in the Chigi Palace admits me into "the presence."

A person at the far corner of the room rises from a chair behind a large desk. A hand and arm extend toward me in the Fascist salute. The outstretched hand seems a magnet, a commanding gesture. Then Mussolini comes from behind the desk, advances toward me, takes my hand in a gripping handshake.

GRACIOUS RECOGNITION
He places a chair for me and we talk—as we did when Fascism was an experiment, not a fact. Today, his gracious reception is a recognition of my having understood Fascism at a time when correspondents were reticent to see the real power in this ex-Socialist son of a blacksmith.

It is the custom in interviewing

Mussolini to send in a questionnaire. Typewritten responses are granted. This obviates misrepresentation and loss of time. Applications for audiences from Americans alone, if granted, would leave Mussolini no time to carry out the Fascist program.

A question, perhaps lacking in tact, impels me:

"After Mussolini—what?"

His reply is concise.

"After me, Fascism will continue undisturbed and undisturbable. Whoever succeeds me in my work of government, if he would remain in unison with the spirit of the country, must be loyal to fascist principles. Then his work will be comparatively easy."

It is also a bit personal to ask his opinion of himself but Mussolini's reply is characteristic:

"It is difficult and controversial for those who come after to measure and define a political figure; time and ideas continually change the point of view. It is still more difficult for contemporaries to place a leader of people in time and space. It is vain and impossible to define oneself. Regarding myself, I know this: that I live and work and prefer to be judged by my work."

ITALY HIS EGO
One most important thing about Mussolini is that he leaves no one lukewarm or indifferent. People are either extravagantly for or extravagantly against him. And one flash from his prominent eyes bespeaks a man of great ego—but his ego is spelled ITALY.

The number of times he has been called the world's greatest patriot inspires my question as to his definition of that word.

"I have no special definition for patriot," he replies. "Patriot, for me, as for all, can have no other meaning than he who places love of country before love of self and for this love is ready to sacrifice even his life."

"In my life and in my work I have no other vision than my country. Only for it do I nourish aspirations and ambitions. To it I would be ready to sacrifice myself."

I rise to go. Mussolini accompanies me across that huge room to the distant door. He takes my hand, bends over it and kisses it.

Yes—it is arivederci until my rendezvous four years hence with the famous Fascist premier.

New York—(49)—The list of 1927 challengers for the Davis cup international team tennis trophy, were brought to 18 Saturday by the entry of Japan and Canada to the American zone of competition.
Canada first competed for the cup in 1913 and after the lapse due to the world re-entered in 1920. Japan gained the distinction of reaching the challenge round against the United States in its first attempt in 1921.

COBB OFFERS UNIQUE LOGIC ON SOUTHPAWS

New York—Southpaws as a rule are poison to left-handed batters. Ty Cobb is one of the few exceptions to the accepted rule.

Cobb, greatest batter of all time, has some interesting observations on this feature of play.

"It has been my experience," says Cobb, "that left handers with limited stuff are hardest for me to hit. For example, I would prefer batting against 'Lefty' Grove, speediest southpaw in the majors, to Tom Zachary, perhaps the slowest."

"Zachary, with his change of pace, is hardest for me to time."

LAZZARI, NOTED BASSO, TO SING HERE DURING MAY

Artist Will Appear With Chicago Civic Opera Co. at Music Festival

Probably the greatest basso in America today is Virgilio Lazzari, a member of the Chicago Civic Opera Co. who will sing in Lawrence Memorial chapel on May 17 with the Operatic trio of Chicago. This trio will come here the second night of the Spring Music festival and will appear in a concert of operatic excerpts, assisted by Schola Cantorum of Lawrence Conservatory of Music.

When Lazzari made his debut in the title role of Boito's "Mefistofele" in the auditorium in Chicago, Paul R. Martin, music critic, proclaimed "there is probably no basso singer in America who is his superior." The audience which heard the opera that night echoed Mr. Martin's praise and other audiences since that time have echoed his words.

In assuming this role, Lazzari shouldered a great burden, for Mefistofele to patrons of the Chicago Civic Opera Co. had come to mean Feodor Chapiplin and it was commonly supposed that Chapiplin was the one man in the world able to do justice to the part. Lazzari has set aside this supposition. His voice was found to be far better suited to the part than is that of the great Russian. He proved beyond a question, Mr. Martin believed, that he is a thoroughly schooled actor with an instinct for making the best of any situation and of giving life to this character to make it an intensely interesting study.

He will come here with Marjorie Maxwell, soprano and Ricardo Martin, tenor. The three artists will sing solo, duet and trio numbers from the famous operas. Chaperone will be sung by Schola Cantorum directed by Carl J. Waterman.

The Minneapolis Symphony orchestra will play two concerts at the chapel on May 16. In the afternoon a program especially arranged for children and their parents will be presented. The orchestra also will assist a chorus of 20 children from the city schools who will sing a children's cantata "The Ugly Duckling." The evening concert will be in two parts, the first being of the orchestra alone and the second with the orchestra and Schola Cantorum which will sing Coterie Taylor's oratorio "Blavatha's Departure."

Season tickets will be sold for the two evening concerts and single admissions for the matinee and evening performances. Carl C. McKee is business manager. A committee of Appleton men is in charge of the festival. Stephen C. Rosebush is president of the group, and Dr. Charles Reineck, treasurer.

STUDENTS FORM TEAMS TO DEBATE NEED FOR SCHOOL

The Oregon debate form of delivery may be used by Appleton high school teams to argue the need for a new senior high school here, Adam Aitchison, debate coach has announced. The system allows the first and third speakers of a team to talk for 20 minutes each and the second speaker questions or cross examines the first and third speakers on the opposing squad. Under the old form the speakers have ten minutes each and five minutes rebuttal.

Teams to debate the question of the independence of the Philippines will be entered in the Fox River Valley Forensic League contest and will use the regulation form.

The Oregon method gives greater opportunity for conclusive argumentation, the coach believes, and for showing the real knowledge of the question. Four debate teams were selected this year. An affirmative and negative team will argue on the Philippine question and two teams will discuss the need for a new school before local audiences.

STUDENTS OF FERNWOOD SCHOOL PUBLISH PAPER

Students of Fernwood school, district 4, town of Freedom, recently published their first school paper, according to A. G. Meating, county superintendent of schools, who has received a copy of the issue. The paper will be published regularly every month hereafter, the students expect.

Walter Silleox is the editor. Other staff members are: Lillian Carney, assistant editor; Leona Van Der Biomen, Marie Hooyman, Lillian Carney, district news; Lillian Carney, school news; Evelyn Garvey, lost and found advertisements. Contributors to the first issue were Eugene Krueger, Carl Simpson and Pearl Simpson. Miss Elizabeth C. Ohsarska is the teacher. The purpose of the publication is outlined thusly:

"Since you, dear parents, do not come to school, we will bring our school to your homes, through our paper."

How Children Quickly Gain Robust Health

For weak, puny, inactive children and especially those that have rickets, and need a sure builder that promotes the growth of teeth and bones, cod liver oil is the one medicine supreme—nothing helps like it. But it is nasty and repulsive and evil smelling, and nearly always upsets children's stomachs—so now up-to-date pharmacists advise McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets, with their wealth of vitamins. Children love them as they do candy, because they are sugar coated and easy to take. One boy gained 11½ pounds in seven weeks, and is now healthy and happy—thousands of other children have grown strong and robust. Sixty tablets for 60 cents at Schlicht Bros. and druggists everywhere. Try them for 30 days and if you are not happily satisfied with the test get your money back. But demand McCoy's—it says to get the genuine. adv.

SINGS HERE

Virgilio Lazzari, noted basso, will sing here with the Operatic trio of the Chicago Civic Opera Co. on May 17. His appearance is included in the program for the Spring Music festival.

Menasha Parents Seek Son Reported Killed In War

A heart broken father and mother again are pleading with their son, reported killed in the world war, whom they believe lives, to come home to them at Menasha. A letter was inserted in the Appleton Post-Crescent from E. W. Bergeron, father of Urban J. Bergeron, asking the boy to come home to his parents who are waiting and looking for him every day.

During the World war, word was received of the death of Urban J. Bergeron. The parents accepted the government's report and procedure had been started for collecting insurance left by the boy. But rumors were heard that the son had been seen alive in the United States and later a man came to Menasha whom people believed was Urban Bergeron. He then disappeared but was later located in a hospital at New Orleans, La. Again he disappeared.

The government is now convinced, it is reported, that the man seen at Menasha and New Orleans is an impostor, but the parents believe he is their boy. They have made searches throughout the country to find him.

Mr. Bergeron's letter: "Urban J. Bergeron My Dear Son: Will you please come home as soon as you see this your Father and Mother are broken hearted waiting and longing for your return. It is you we want Son to make us happy and not that money so don't say you have no place to go and be home sick and lonesome when you have a home where your parents are waiting and looking for you every day, with love. Your Father, E. W. Bergeron."

CLARION EDITORS SEEK AID FROM BUSINESS MEN

More than 350 business men in Appleton have been sent letters by the business manager of the Clarion, Appleton high school yearbook, asking them to help sponsor the book. The sponsor ship method replaces advertising and is less expensive both for the business men and for the school as it conserves page space. This will be the third year the system has been used.

Robert Eads is the student business manager of the Clarion and Miss Esther Graf is faculty business sponsor. Girls in Miss Mae Webster's of Bee class did the mimeographing, addressing and mailing of the letters. Each man was asked to buy one sponsorship which would be $5 with a book or $2 without a Clarion. A list of sponsors will be printed in the book. Student subscriptions help finance the yearbook.

TEACHER SEEKING BETTER STATUS, MEATING THINKS

Correction of Public Attitude Would Increase Efficiency in School Room

Nothing much, yet everything, is wrong with the teaching profession, A. G. Meating, county superintendent of schools, says in an article entitled

"What is the Matter with Teaching," and published in the last issue of "The Ohio Teacher." "The two extremes are covered in the attitude of the public," he says in part. "The teacher wants professional recognition and the same social status that is awarded workers in other lines of established professional service. The teacher wants a tenure of service that will not be disturbed by every discontented parent who feels that his child has not been the subject of preferential treatment."

"The teacher wants to be paid for expert service in proportion to other workers. She wants to be able to assume a community status on a par with the lawyer, the doctor, the banker. "Given such a status and tenure of position, determined only by the quality of service rendered, there will come into the schoolroom the types of personalities that will develop the best in children, devote themselves to the betterment of their profession, and strive earnestly to fit themselves for positive leadership."

"A wrong public attitude toward the status of the teacher is the cause of the present discontent, and the willingness of more capable persons to place themselves in less desirable positions. Three years ago there was a shortage of approximately 700 legally qualified teachers in the state, he points out. Now there is a surplus of approximately 900. He concludes that something is wrong with a profession whose personnel can shift so readily from starvation to satiety."

"Take Father John's Medicine and Stay Healthy"

"The slogan of our family is: 'Take Father John's Medicine and stay healthy.' We have used it successfully for many years. We find that our children put on weight and get more rugged each day while they are taking Father John's Medicine." (Signed Mrs. Henry Desautel, 193 Fisher St., No. Attleboro, Mass.)

Father John's Medicine builds strength to resist Colds, Coughs, Bronchitis, Asthma, Flu, Pneumonia, and also relieves and heals the affected membrane. Do not wait. Take Father John's Medicine now. No drugs or alcohol. Over 70 years of HEALTH VICTORIES.

"POSITIVE AGITATION"

~ the time-saver and work-saver ~

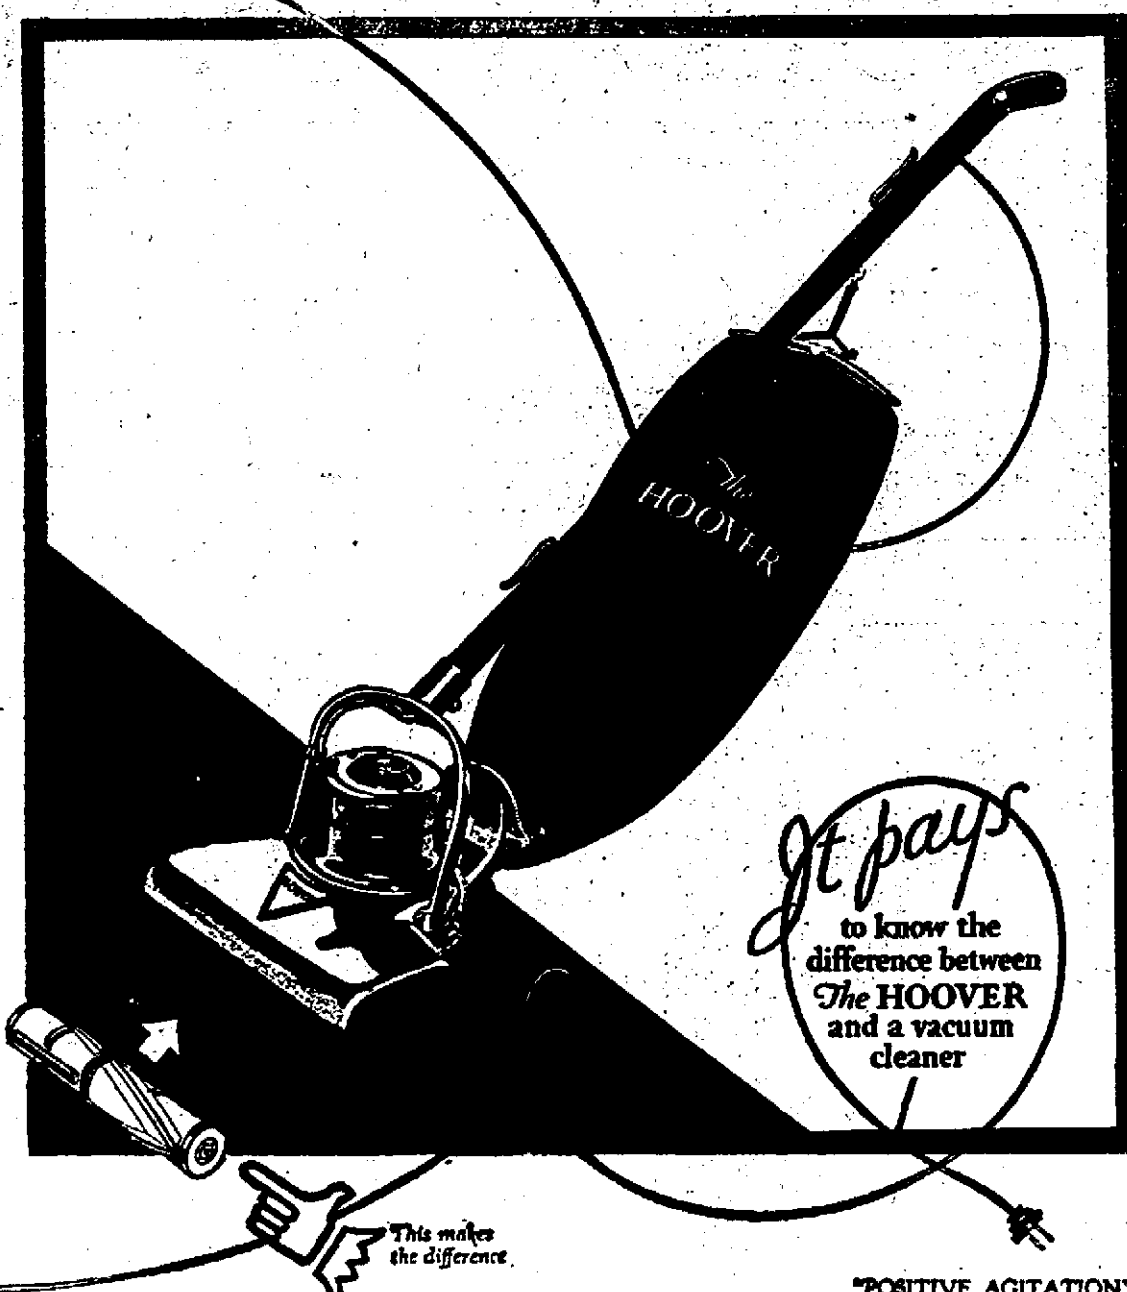

Think of the finest and most efficient vacuum cleaner you have ever seen.

Then think of that cleaner as having added to it a new principle, a plus advantage, which more than doubles its efficiency!

Now you have a rough idea of the immense advance accomplished in the new Hoover, through its revolutionary cleaning principle "Positive Agitation."

By reason of this exclusive principle the new Hoover cleans faster, easier, deeper—so much so that it surpasses even the celebrated standard-design Hoover in these important particulars:

- 1 For the first time, it makes possible "Positive Agitation" of floor coverings.
- 2 By actual test, in the ordinary cleaning time, it beats out and sweeps up from carpetings an average of 131% more dirt.
- 3 It is an even greater rug-saver; the oftener a carpet is cleaned with a Hoover the longer that carpet will wear.
- 4 It is virtually service-proof; every part, including the new motor, requiring no oiling.
- 5 It increases the efficiency of its remarkable dusting tools because of its 50% stronger suction.
- 6 Its exclusive new bag is made of the most efficient dust-and-germ-filtering cloth yet devised.
- 7 Its form and finish are of startling beauty; and every new feature insures even greater operating ease.

It pays to know the difference between The HOOVER and a vacuum cleaner

You buy a cleaner to save time and energy—why not be sure you get the cleaner that saves them most? Your Authorized Hoover Dealer will deliver you the new Hoover complete with dusting tools for only $6.25 down, with the balance in easy monthly payments.

Hidalgo's ear could distinguish no difference in the music played both ways on the Gulbransen

You will find you can play with human expression—self-expression—the first time you try. In a week or sooner, you can win the admiration of your family and friends.
